Anthony Babauta said the release by the Department of the Interior's Office of Inspector General's investigative report about his conduct in office supported his contention all along that he didn't do anything wrong with regards to the awarding of grants.

"I have reviewed the final investigation report conducted by the Department of the Interior's Office of Inspector General and I am satisfied it reaffirms that my official acts and decisions as Assistant Secretary of the Interior for Insular Areas were legitimate endeavors to improve the quality of life for areas under my responsibility," said the former assistant secretary for Insular Affairs in an email to Saipan Tribune.

WHERE'S THE BEEF?

Tinian Mayor Ramon Dela Cruz, left, explains to members of the House of Representatives during last Wednesday's budget session how the island's beef initiative and plans to export livestock to Guam is hampered by the lack of surface vessels. Dela Cruz said Tinian's cattle ranchers are expected to increase its head of cattle from the current 2,000 to about 5,000 next year.

3-month delay in CHC housing allowance

By MONETH G. DEPOSA
moneth_deposa@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Many employees of the Commonwealth Health Center are dismayed and fear anew the instability of their employment after volunteering that their housing privilege has been delayed for three months now.

Saipan Tribune learned that the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. owes staff housing benefits for the months of April, May, and June.

In a statement yesterday from corporation CEO Esther L. Muna, she disclosed plans to issue checks for the three months' worth of housing allowance.

"We're paying all dues today. I don't have the numbers now but they will be paid today," Muña told Saipan Tribune.

She did not disclose where the source of the funding will come from.

A hospital employee, who spoke on condition of anonymity, was elated with the good news, but admitted that many are beginning to fear the stability of the corporation.

A registered nurse at CHC also confided that she was forced to adjust her monthly expenses to include her housing expense, on top of high utility bills.

"We're hoping this situation will not

Public hearing sought for casino commish nominees

The Saipan and Northern Islands Legislative Delegation wants the nominees for the newly created Commonwealth Casino Commission to go through a public hearing before being confirmed.

Senate Floor Leader Pete Reyes (IR-Saipan) was the first to suggest the public hearing for nominees Maria Frica T. Pangelinan, David C. Sablan, and Alvaro A. Santos during yesterday's delegation session on Capitol Hill.

Pangelinan is a former lawmaker who is on the board of the Marianas Public Land Trust, while Santos is a former chief financial officer of the Commonwealth Healthcare Corp. Sablan, meanwhile, is a well-known businessman.

Reyes said the delegation would be wise to adopt the procedures in screening nominees that the Senate Committee on Executive Appointments and Government Investigations regularly conducts.

He said a public hearing similar to what the Senate's EAGI conducts would compel the Casino Commission nominees to attend their session and allow members of the community to speak for or against their nomination.

Earlier House Vice Speaker Francisco Dela Cruz (IR-Saipan) said that it is only right for the nominees to attend the SNILD session on their confimation because it would not be "fair posing questions to ourselves" with regards to the nominees' qualifications in becoming members of the commission.

He added that if the local delegation is not given a chance to quiz the nominees, the whole process would appear to be "another case of haste and confirm and approve before finding out what happens after."

Dela Cruz told colleagues that they owe it to themselves to have the Casino Commission nominees to be present during their confirmation hearing.

The 21-member SNILD is tasked to either confirm or reject the governor's appointees to the Casino Commission. Tinian and Rota legislative delegations are also tasked to do the same when it comes to their respective mayors' nominees.

While the Lottery Commission decides whether to grant an exclusive Saipan casino license and to whom by June 19, the Casino Commission will be tasked to regulate the industry.

Under the Saipan casino law, Casino Commission members will be compensated $40,000 on the first year, and then $20 an hour for official meetings in succeeding years. The governor said the retiree appointees have the option to continue to receive their pension or get their commission compensation. (Mark Rabago)

Guam gets ready to host 12th Festival of Pacific Arts

SUVA, Fiji—Members of the Council of Pacific Arts and Culture are impressed by the progress being made by Guam in preparing to host the region and the world at the 12th Festival of Pacific Arts in May 2016. They showed their support and appreciation when they met recently (May 27–29) in Fiji at the 26th Meeting of the Council of Pacific Arts and Culture, for which the Secretariat of the Pacific Community is the secretariat.

Guam will play host to all the nations of the Pacific, including Rapa Nui, Norfolk Island, and Hawaii, from May 22 to June 4, 2016, under the theme of “What we own, what we have, what we share: united voices of the Pacific.”

Jacqueline Balbas, program coordinator for the Guam Council on the Arts and Humanities Agency, updated the members of the Council on their preparations.

The FestPac Coordinating Committee is in place, with six working subcommittees dealing with programming, logistics, volunteers, marketing, finance and ceremonies, all of which started their work in November last year. Workshops have been held and the artistic disciplines that will feature at the festival include visual arts, literary arts, performing arts, traditional arts, and forums and seminars. Preparations will go into full gear in early 2015.

The festival is estimated to cost U$13 million, funded through government appropriations and the private sector. A trust fund was established for this purpose. The Bank of Guam and United Airlines are key partners, and negotiations with telecommunications, fuel, hotel, automobile, and shipping sponsors are ongoing.

A local public relations campaign for the festival was launched in May this year, with the Guam Visitors Bureau as the festival marketing lead. In 2014, the focus will be on-island public relations, and in 2015 off-island marketing will begin. The year 2016 will see increased event excitement. Information about shipping needs, charter flight needs, and anticipated sizes of delegations will be obtained through responses to surveys sent to SPC member countries. Collaboration with the South Pacific Tourism Organization is being planned to promote the festival in the region and beyond.

The 26th meeting of the Council of Pacific Arts and Culture was held at Vale ni Bose Levu Vakaturga in Suva, Fiji. The meeting chair was Guam (host of the 12th Festival of Pacific Arts in 2016) and the vice chair was Hawaii (proposed host of the 13th Festival of Pacific Arts in 2020). The Council discussed a wide range of issues relating to the Festival of Pacific Arts and promotion of the culture sector in the region. The Council has 27 members and SPC, was formed in 1975 for the purpose of managing the Festival of Pacific Arts and promoting cultural development in the region. (SPC) continue. We don't want to experience the same feeling we had in 2011,” the employee said yesterday, adding that the housing privilege accorded to off-island recruits is one of the biggest motivations why they continue to stay.

This housing benefit is accorded only to off-island hires, majority of whom are nurses recruited from the Philippines.

CHCC gives a $600 monthly housing allowance for single employees recruited from off-island and $800 each month for those with families.

In fiscal year 2011, the allowance was delayed up to seven months. However, due to significant improvement in the hospital's collections and revenues, the corporation was able to pay this obligation little by little until the total arrears were paid off.

In recent separate meetings of both the CHCC board and the Marianas Public Land Trust, it was learned that the corporation's financial condition is in a “poor state” as a result of a significant decline in collections and revenues.

After the CHCC paid its $3-million loan with MPLT in April, it was disclosed that little is left in its bank account.

CHCC, which was approved a one-year extension of the line of credit, had asked last week to drawdown the funds, the bulk of which will go to payroll, vendors, and other critical needs of the hospital.

The housing allowance is among the benefits that may be cut or terminated if financial challenges continue at the hospital.

Corporation officials earlier disclosed that many employees have signed a new contract, which incorporates salary adjustments to cover a portion of their housing benefit. Among these employees are physicians who were recruited from outside the CNMI.

Saipan Tribune learned that CHCC has over a hundred employees receiving housing allowances.

According to NMC president Dr. Sharon Y. Hart, the Commonwealth will have an extremely challenging time in reaching U.S. President Barack Obama's goal of 60 percent. But the CNMI, Hart said, must proceed in this direction.

Based on the study conducted by the National Center of Higher Education Management Systems, the CNMI's education attainment level by citizenship showed that there are far more non-U.S. citizens in the workforce that possess a bachelor's degree at 19.7 percent compared to U.S. citizens who have a bachelor's degree at only 12.9 percent.

The study also found that U.S. citizens in the Commonwealth who obtained vocational certificates were at 4.8 percent versus the 10.6 percent non-U.S. citizens with the same vocational certificates.

Among those who graduated high school, U.S. citizens on the islands posted a 47.6 percent level compared to non-U.S. citizens with 55.8 percent.

The study was based on the 2010 Census data.

“When the National Center of Higher Education Management Systems (through Dennis Jones) reviewed the CNMI in relation to the rest of the United States, he found that overall the CNMI ranks just below the 50th U.S. state as having adults equipped with postsecondary credentials. This should be very alarming to the CNMI, as it does not give us the economic edge to compete,” Hart told Saipan Tribune yesterday.

And, as the CNMI needs to replace the CW workforce in the future, this task becomes even more daunting, Hart said, especially as CW workers possess more bachelor's degrees than the CNMI's own local population base.

What is critical, Hart said, is that good-faith discussions must take place now with the business community and with government leaders.

“We can positively impact and grow an educated workforce, but it will require that we all work together, develop a comprehensive educational plan for the future, and ensure adequate resources are made available to help us, from K to 16, to accomplish our education and training goals,” she said.

She said that the CNMI must establish statewide goals that will enable stakeholders to focus time and resources on a common and committed effort. Supporting this initiative will get everybody on the same page whereby they can then set annual priorities, evaluate progress, and celebrate its coming successes.

“All of this, in my opinion, is achievable. NMC has significant plans on how we are going to move forward on this. We are being extremely aggressive, but we need to be, because we are that ‘engine for economic growth’ in the CNMI. But, you can't run an engine when you are out of gas,” she added.

President Obama and his administration have set goals for an educated workforce that targets roughly 60 percent of Americans to earn college degrees and certificates by 2020 to regain international lead, compared with about 40 percent today.

BIRTHDAY SHOUTOUT

He, however, acknowledged that there are some appearances of conflicts in his past actions, “but I trusted then, as I do now, that my personal relationships with island leaders had no bearing in how I made a final decision. I consider those whom I interacted with, and were subjects of this investigation, to be outstanding leaders and faithful public servants. No one worked to betray the public's trust.”

The DOI investigative report found that, against the advice of his staff and grant specialists, Babauta directed the award of two OIA grants to the University of Guam to support the Micronesian Center for a Sustainable Future.

The report said both grants went to Babauta's former employer, a UOG senior official, and UOG subsequently hired Babauta's friend as the MCSF project coordinator.

“Our investigation revealed that UOG allowed the MCSF project coordinator to expend $32,636.34 in grant funds on unallowable expenses, many of which were of personal benefit to the MCSF project coordinator,” stated the investigative report made public yesterday.

The report may be viewed at www.doi.gov/oig/reports/upload/BabautaPublic1.pdf.

Public apology

Babauta was contrite on allegations that he made inappropriate comments to employees and conducted himself unprofessionally at times.

“DOI's report also commented on personal matters. I am embarrassed because of it and publicly apologize to my family. It has been nearly a year and a half since I resigned my office. I continue to value the honor and privilege of having served in my capacity and to have worked in changing the direction of policy and improving relationships between the federal government and the U.S. territories and Freely Associated States,” he said.

The report also states that Babauta had one OIA employee perform work outside the scope of his government duties.

“We...found that Babauta resided at the guesthouse of one subordinate employee for several months without providing compensation. We did not find evidence that Babauta used government travel for personal gain, but there were certain trips for government business in which he appeared to benefit personally,” the report states.

Despite his unceremonious exit from the OIA, Babauta said he is still proud of his achievements while in office.

“I am a strong believer in the initiatives that I put forth to empower island constituencies. I feel that my agenda which included implementing renewable energy, building capacity of non-profit organizations, encouraging economic development, providing decision-makers and the public with information about their economies and the state of their public schools, building capacity and supporting education, hospitals, first responders, local initiatives to improve accountability, and promoting island cultures, was worthwhile. I am grateful for the support that many have expressed to me for my term in office and I am happy that this final report brings closure to my tenure. I will continue working toward improving our islands and look forward to opportunities to return to public service.”

On Oct. 19, 2012, the U.S. Department of the Interior's Office of the Solicitor brought allegations to the Office of the Inspector General that Babauta mistreated his employees through discrimination and sexual harassment, misused government equipment and personnel, and took personal trips under the guise of official business.

These allegations originated from OIA employees, some of whom filed Equal Employment Opportunity complaints against him.

UOG reaction

In a statement, University of Guam said it stands by its record in competing for federal grants and in its administration of grant projects from multiple federal agencies.

It said UOG managed over

110 grants in fiscal year 2013, infusing over $38 million into the economies of Guam and the region. It also defended MCSF and the entity's involvement in the OIA investigation.

“Though the Micronesian Center for a Sustainable Future is not a university entity, the administration of the MCSF grant was an important effort by UOG to provide assistance to the Micronesian Chief Executives and directly correlates to our regional mission. UOG remains an active partner of the region by providing research, technical assistance and service through federal grants and contracts.”

UOG said that grants awarded it through DOI have been competitively sought and have followed the technical review processes required by DOI.

“UOG followed government policies in regards to the selection and contracting of the MCSF coordinator and adhered to procurement law for purchases under the MCSF grant,” it said.

UOG said the investigative report has not affected the ability of UOG to apply for and receive grant funding from DOI and other federal agencies.

“We are grateful for the work and support of Assistant Secretary Babauta during his tenure in office and for the opportunity to participate in many projects and activities which are of continuing benefit for the people of the region as well as the University of Guam,” the UOG statement adds.

Santos is new NMC Foundation president

The Northern Marianas College Foundation announced yesterday that it has a new president in the person of Joseph C. Santos, who succeeds Dr. Alan Stuart Markoff to the post.

According to Santos, the Foundation is very enthusiastic about fundraising to assist NMC in accomplishing its mission and is excited about working with the community.

He announced yesterday the upcoming 11th NMC Foundation Open golf tournament scheduled on June 28 at the Laolao Bay Golf & Resort. This event is the foundation's biggest fundraiser every year.

"We humbly seeking the community's support for the upcoming in both participation and sponsorship," said Santos, adding that all gifts and donations will directly benefit NMC in advancing educational opportunities for all students.

Santos also congratulated the college for the recent reaffirmation of its accreditation.

"Congratulations to NMC on the being reaffirmed as an accredited community college, a magnificent accomplishment by the Board of Regents and [NMC] president [Dr. Sharon] Hart," said Santos.

The Board of Regents established the NMC Foundation in 1999. It is a non-profit organization and its primary task is to handle a federal endowment fund of $3 million for the college.

The foundation's board of directors is composed Markoff, Santos, David Burger, Jerry Facey, Bud White, David Sablan, Jack Kiyoshi, Lillian Cabrera, and Michael Ernest. (Moneth G. Deposa) to reverse the federal court's recent ruling on the Article 12 initiative matter.

The commission, CEC chair Frances M. Sablan, and CEC executive director Robert A. Guerrero, through assistant attorney general Charles Brasington, are appealing to reverse U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona's decision issued last May 20.

Brasington notified the federal court yesterday about their appeal to the Ninth Circuit.

In that landmark decision, Manglona ruled that qualified voters who are not of Northern Marianas descents must have the opportunity to vote on the Article 12 initiative and any other initiative to amend Article 12.

Article 12 restricts the acquisition of permanent and long-term interests in real property to persons of Northern Marianas descent.

Manglona issued a summary judgment that favored John H. Davis Jr. in his lawsuit.

Davis, a registered voter in the CNMI and a non-NMD, sued CEC and its officials in his desire to vote on any initiative to amend Article 12. (Ferdie de la Torre)

TCGCC: 120 days to review Mega Stars' application

By MARK RABAGO
mark_rabago@saipantribune.com
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

The Tinian Casino Gaming Control Commission said the company tasked to review Mega Stars Overseas Ltd.'s license application to take over and operate Tinian Dynasty Hotel and Casino will have 120 days to complete the investigation.

TCGCC executive director Lucia Blanco-Maratita said that Mega Stars submitted the casino license application and required forms last Monday, which was within the five days they were required to do so.

The next step in the casino license application process is for the TCGCC and Gaming Integrated Services to review Mega Stars' application.

Blanco-Maratita said entire review process could take up to four months.

"The way it works is the firm has 120 days to complete the investigation. But the start of the 120 days does not begin until all forms and additional documents needed are submitted. We're not on that stage and the 120 days has not started yet."

TCGCC contracted Gaming Integrated Services specifically to review the Hong Kong-based company's application for a casino license related to its take over of Tinian Dynasty.

Mega Stars chief executive officer Cario Hon confirmed that their company submitted the additional documents the TCGCC asked for.

He said it's now up to the island of Tinian—the TCGCC, the Tinian Mayor's Office, and the people of Tinian—whether their planned investment in Tinian Dynasty pushes through.

"Everything depends on the people of Tinian or those who work for the TGCC or the mayor's office. If they want they can make it [application] fast or not, it's their choice...If they think we're good for the island, they shouldn't give investors a long time to wait. We can't control [the situation]; we're not the government."

Hon also expressed his frustrations that TCGCC appears to be making Mega Stars go through hoops before making official the sale of Tinian Dynasty to the company.

"Since coming here we've followed all the instructions, we followed the law, paid up the money, and did everything. We didn't apply for a license. We just bought the shares of the company. We didn't apply for a [casino] license on Tinian. Everyone's working there as before. The managers are there and the dealers are there. Everything's the same. The only difference is we paid up the money. [But] if they want Michael Kwan to run it, let Michael Kwan run it. They decide."

Kwan is the chairman of Hong Kong Entertainment

Overseas Ltd., the current owner of Tinian Dynasty.

Last May 23, TCGCC returned Mega Stars' application by a 4-0 vote, citing the investor's failure to execute the proper forms necessary as part of the application process.

Mega Stars has already spent more than $40 million so far to keep the struggling casino resort afloat. It is also planning to plunk down an additional $600 million to develop a new resort on Tinian's Kastiyu Plateau.

Mega Stars is also part owner of Marianas Stars Entertainment Inc., one of the two applicants vying for an exclusive license to operate an integrated casino resort on Saipan.

Judge to dismiss suit against 2 military special force members

By FERGIE DE LA TORRE
fergie_deltorre@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

The federal court yesterday filed a notice of intent to dismiss a lawsuit filed in 2012 by attorney Ramon K. Quichocho on behalf of a tourist who was allegedly beaten up by two members of the U.S. military special force outside G.I.G. Discotheque in Garapan.

Ki Pung Kwon filed the complaint on Sept. 25, 2012, but U.S. District Court for the NMI Chief Judge Ramona V. Manglona said the court docket contains no record of proof that the complaint was served on either defendants, Carl Weight Jr. and Marty Joel Lopez.

Citing Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the judge said "if a defendant is not served within 120 days after the complaint is filed, the court—on motion or on its own after notice to the plaintiff—must dismiss the action without prejudice against that defendant or order that service be made within a specific time."

To avoid summary dismissal, Manglona gave Quichocho no later than June 13, 2014, to show cause why the case should not be dismissed without prejudice for failure to effect service.

Dismissal without prejudice means a plaintiff is allowed to refile a new suit on the same claim in the future.

Ki Pung Kwon, a male Korean, is suing U.S. military special force members Weight Jr. and Lopez for assault, battery, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Kwon asked the court to hold the two liable to pay him damages, attorney's fees and court costs.

According to Quichocho in the complaint, Kwon and a friend named Tony went to G.I.G. Discotheque on Sept. 22, 2012, at 12:30am. As they were leaving at 2:40am, Weight and Lopez allegedly started taunting and assaulting Kwon.

Quichocho said that when Kwon got into a vehicle, one of the defendants opened the door and punched and hit Kwon.

Weight and Lopez allegedly pulled Kwon out of the vehicle and continued beating and taunting him.

Tony called the police, prompting the defendants to run away from the scene.

An ambulance later brought Kwon to the Commonwealth Health Center where he received several stitches on the head.

US Labor chief extends CW program in the CNMI for five years

WASHINGTON — In 2008, Congress passed the Consolidated Natural Resources Act, which applies the immigration laws of the United States to the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. To minimize potential adverse economic effects, the CNRA provides for a five-year transitional worker program, known as the CNMI-Only Transitional Worker—or CW-1—program, which ends on Dec. 31, 2014. However, the CNRA authorizes the secretary of labor to extend this transition period for up to five years based on the labor needs of the CNMI to ensure that an adequate number of workers are available for legitimate businesses.

U.S. Secretary of Labor Thomas E. Perez on Tuesday made the determination to extend the CW-1 program until Dec. 31, 2019, based on his consideration of a series of eight factors stipulated by the CNRA.

The CNRA required the secretary of labor, in consultation with the U.S. departments of Homeland Security, Defense, and the Interior, along with the governor of the CNMI, to ascertain the current and anticipated labor needs of the CNMI before determining whether to extend the program. Following Tuesday's determination, the department will continue to monitor and assess the labor needs of the CNMI, in particular any good faith efforts to locate, educate, train or otherwise prepare U.S. citizens, lawful permanent residents and unemployed foreign workers already in the CNMI to assume jobs in legitimate businesses.

CNMI employers have a continuing obligation to ensure and protect workers' rights by adhering to and complying with applicable federal civil rights, labor and workplace safety laws.

For more information on the secretary of labor's determination, visit the Federal Register Notice of the transition period extension. U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services provided extensions of status and grants of new CW-1 status only until Dec. 31, 2014, the previous sunset date of the program. If the petition is otherwise eligible, USCIS will resume approving CW-1 status in increments of up to one year. (USCIS)

Flashback

A LOOK BACK AT PAST YEARS' HEADLINES

June 6, 2006

Layoffs possible by July 1

The CNMI government is now looking at a closer deadline for the possible furlough of certain employees within the Executive Branch. Press secretary Charles P. Reyes Jr. said yesterday that layoffs may take place by July 1, a month earlier than the target date initially announced by the administration. "Because of the severity of our financial situation, drastic actions are imminent. Such actions will be taken by July 1, 2006. The fourth quarter allotment will be drastically curtailed and furloughs are in order," Reyes said.

CUC: Water wells drying up due to La Niña

The CNMI is now experiencing a very, very severe dry season because of the effects of the global weather phenomenon called La Niña, Commonwealth Utilities Corp. spokesperson Pamela Mathis warned yesterday. "The water wells are already drying up and not at the levels we get normally. So the plea to conserve water is just as great as a plea to conserve power," said Mathis in an interview with Saipan Tribune. Mathis said she received Friday a bulletin about the effects of La Niña from the Pacific El Niño-Southern Oscillation Applications Center. La Niña is characterized by unusually cold ocean temperatures in the eastern equatorial Pacific. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced in February this year the return of La Niña.

Pagan pozzolan: Only 12M metric tons of it

Only about 12 million metric tons of pozzolan remain available on Pagan, according to a mining expert working for the Department of Public Lands. This estimate by DPL consultant John W. Wilson is much lower than previous estimates regarding the quantity of pozzolan on Pagan, which ranged between 32 million and 200 million metric tons. In a statement, DPL said Wilson's report takes into account the loose nature of the pozzolan deposit, and the erosion that has taken place since the first measurements of volume were reported in the U.S. Geological Survey's 1984 report.

NMI Labor seeks feds' guidance on wage hike

The Department of Labor has sought guidance from the U.S. Department of Labor as to how the new minimum wage law applies to domestic workers, fishermen, farmers, and tipped employees in the CNMI. Labor Secretary Gil M. San Nicolas told Saipan Tribune yesterday that he raised the issues with U.S. Labor Wage & Hour Division assistant district director Terence J. Trotter in a letter he sent Thursday. Since the passage of the Fair Minimum Wage Act of 2007, San Nicolas said that Labor has been inundated with calls from concerned residents who are wondering how the law affects them.

June 6, 2008

Wage hike cuts into benefits

The recent minimum wage hike in the Commonwealth is forcing many businesses to scale back worker benefits to remain in operation, according to a recent survey of key business leaders. Proponents of the increased wages, set to rise again by 50 cents each year until they meet the federal level, have long said the hike is needed to ensure workers are fairly paid compared to their counterparts on the U.S. mainland. Yet the mandate for higher pay has left some local employers—who are also facing skyrocketing utility costs and decreasing revenues—with little choice but to cut benefits like housing, health care, transportation, meals and other amenities.

Federal officials to descend on NMI

Federal officials are expected to visit in the next few weeks to initial talks on the U.S. government's imminent takeover of the local immigration control. Pete A. Tenorio, the Commonwealth's resident representative to Washington, D.C., reported that various federal agencies have begun preliminary discussions about how the "federalization" of CNMI immigration will be applied. Tenorio said the Northern Marianas can expect a team of officials from the U.S. departments of Homeland Security and Labor to visit next month to meet with the Fitial administration, the Legislature, and the business community regarding the new immigration law. Gov. Benigno R. Fitial also announced that Department of the Interior officials, including recently appointed.

Woodruff: Labor relies on the flawed opinion of former AG

By FERDIE DE LA TORRE

REPORTER

Labor administrative hearing officer Jerry Cody has relied on a deeply flawed opinion of then-attorney general Edward T. Buckingham in sanctioning employers for, among other things, not filing a "declaration" with Labor's Citizen Job Placement Section, according to attorney Stephen Woodruff.

Woodruff told Saipan Tribune yesterday that Buckingham's decision says that "this is a regulation of labor, not immigration, and that the CNMI can do it."

"That contention is even more bogus than the arguments made by the State of Arizona, but it stands as a CNMI Attorney General's opinion, and Mr. Cody may feel bound by it," Woodruff said.

In 2010, President Obama's administration sued Arizona to block provisions of Arizona's controversial immigration law that then-governor Benigno R. Fitial and then-AG Buckingham supported. The Obama administration asserted that the Arizona immigration law usurps the federal government's "pre-eminent authority" under the U.S. Constitution to regulate immigration.

Woodruff said in his opinion, attorney Steven Pixley is correct in his federal preemption contention.

Pixley, as counsel for Kanoa Resort in a Labor case, asserted that the federal government has enacted extensive regulations regarding the CW-1 immigration designation as well as the

Best Sunshine meets with COTA and PSS

REPORTER

Best Sunshine Ltd. has reached out to officials of the Commonwealth Office of Transit Authority and the Public School System in an effort to help the island's lack of public transportation and improve training for the local workforce.

The company's chief operating officer, Terence Tay, met with Commonwealth Office of Transport Authority administrator Thomas Camacho and Education Commissioner Dr. Rita Sablan to discuss public transportation and the possibility of providing school buses to PSS.

According to Tay, they met with Camacho to discuss the five programs under COTA and the planned Saipan Fixed-Flex Route System.

"We talked more on the public transportation situation on Saipan and the CNMI in general just so we could understand how we can fit in and provide something that employment of aliens in the Commonwealth. Pixley said the Department of Labor's enforcement of auxiliary laws and regulations cannot withstand preemption scrutiny.

Woodruff noted that someone needs to put the matter before the federal court and get a declaratory judgment and injunction.

In Arizona, Woodruff said the U.S. Supreme Court held key parts of the Arizona law invalid, and there was not even an express preemption provision in any statute.

"Here, Subtitle A of Title VII of the CNRA [Consolidated Natural Resources Act of 2008] explicitly provides that it and the immigration laws of the United States 'supersede and replace all laws, provisions, or programs of the Commonwealth relating to the admission of aliens and the removal of aliens from the Commonwealth,'" Woodruff said.

The lawyer said that in his opinion, the AG's opinion, which was technically limited to the power of the CNMI government to revoke umbrella permits during the first two years of the transition, was "very clearly and obviously wrong."

The CNRA, Woodruff said, very clearly preempted all CNMI authority relative to immigration, not just laws and regulations but all provisions and programs "relating to" as well.

"The CNMI regulations and enforcement are quite simply a thinly veiled attempt by the CNMI government to refuse to get out of an activity that Congress already kicked them out of, for good cause," he said.

would help residents," Tay said.

Tay said they have discovered that one of the biggest need on the island is some sort of public transportation.

Camacho told Saipan Tribune that Best Sunshine "would like to look at assisting that kind of public purpose and talk with headquarters and see how they can help. Best Sunshine is in a sort of fact-finding mission right now," Camacho said.

Tay said that they had met with Sablan and talked about the collaborative efforts they are trying to do with the Northern Marianas College.

"We just discussed our efforts for community outreach and if you look at the timeline and if we are successful, the high schools will be very important because these are the people who will get on stream to the workforce in four to five years' time and we cannot ignore this segment at this time because they'll be very important down the road," Tay told Saipan Tribune.

Woodruff said the types of CNMI government actions Pixley is complaining about provide absolutely no genuine benefit to U.S. workers in the CNMI.

The lawyer said the CNMI does not progress by thumbing its nose at federal law and insisting on attempting to assert power and authority it does not have.

"That just makes the CNMI look arrogant, petty, silly, and small, and breeds contempt for the law and contempt for the political class," he said.

The CNMI, Woodruff said, can progress by developing sound multi-faceted strategies, building alliances, engendering cooperation, and achieving changes in the law, local and federal.

A timely boost to European security

NATO turned 65 in April. But far from slipping into semiretirement, the Atlantic alliance found new purpose after Russia annexed Crimea and destabilized portions of southern and eastern Ukraine. While the Crimean crisis is best addressed with economic sanctions, it's important to send Russia—and its allies—a strong signal that military capability will be updated, too.

So President Barack Obama, who is on a four-day trip to Europe, deserves support for his proposal to create a $1 billion fund to boost European security. Among many elements, the European Reassurance Initiative, as it's called, would increase military exercises, training and rotational presence across Europe but especially in newer NATO countries; deploy U.S. planners to "augment the capability of our allies"; explore repositioning equipment in Europe; increase U.S. Navy participation in NATO deployments, especially in the Black and Baltic seas, and build "the partner capacity" of non-NATO nations such as Ukraine, Georgia and Moldova.

The initiative is timely, not just because of Western worries over illegal and irrational Russian provocation in Ukraine, but also because Obama has tacitly downplayed European security in order to diplomatically and militarily "pivot" to Asia.

Obama announced the initiative during a visit to Poland to celebrate the 25th anniversary of elections that accelerated the end of Communist rule and, ultimately, of the Soviet Union. Poland has been a stalwart ally since, which is something that Congress should consider when it eventually votes on the European Reassurance Initiative. In this case, politics truly should stop at the water's edge. Central and Eastern Europe, which are more vulnerable to Russian interference, need a strong signal that the United States will live up to its rhetoric on keeping Europe free.

Obama's meeting with Ukraine's president-elect, Petro Poroshenko, should be another reassuring signal that Ukrainians are right to want to align more with Western Europe than with Moscow.

Obama's other stops should shore up the relatively unified European response to Russia, too. In Brussels, he'll meet with G-7 leaders in a session moved from Sochi, Russia (Russian President Vladimir Putin was removed from the guest list, too).

Obama and Putin may meet on Friday in France as Obama and other Western leaders commemorate the 70th anniversary of the D-Day invasion. If so, Obama should use the example of allied sacrifice to reinforce to Putin that despite domestic politics and international rifts, the Western alliance is united in seeking peace through diplomacy, but is capable of strong collective defense, too.

The smartphone and I

I've been a diehard Apple user since Steve & Steve set up shop at a garage in Cupertino but after a brief fingering of the iPad two years ago, I found it to be of not much use in China at the time. I settled back on the reliable MacBook for my cyberspace requirements, skipping the numerous offerings of the famous iPhone altogether, relying more on the keyboard rather than the more proletarian voice of technological culture!

Now, in public places, I am definitely a dinosaur. Outside my second floor sunroom where I quietly but regularly stick the extra chopstick into the potted plants to aerate the soil and drip the precious water to the roots, the front pedestrian traffic underneath my view is that of people thumbing their smartphones to no end, or folks screaming into their cell.

There are seldom any accidents or anything untoward that happens, save the occasional irate walker rudely reminded to step aside after a blaring vehicular horn even as the drivers of newly minted foreign cars finger their cellphones with one hand and steer their car with the other.

When I listen to people talking on the phone, the gabbing is faster than the hundred-meter hurdles at the recently concluded International Track and Field run in Shanghai. They sound louder than the screams from the bleachers, too. If talk was cheap before, it has gotten cheaper today. I often wonder if the voice from the other end gets equal time to blabber, or the parties have enough time to digest the gist of incoming messages. In the street and on terminals like the subway, the train station and the airport, couples do not even bother to look at each other anymore. They are too preoccupied with their smartphones.

This shortened attention span, or non-clarity on which function of our smart machines is on (smartphones are getting to be a cross of the pad, phone, photo clicker, the pod, and a palm eyeliner checker), must be where U.S. diplomats claim that speaking to Chinese officials on matters like trade negotiations and island disputes is like conducting a well-orchestrated "dialogue of the deaf." We'll leave foreign affairs matters to the Ivy leaguers and Tsinghua illuminati.

We've traversed quite a few time zones this week, first heading for Beijing from Shenyang to catch a flight to Vancouver of British Columbia where HK human and financial capital escaped before Xianggang got turned back by HRM of the clipped accent to Zhongguo, finally making a pit stop in Calgary of Alberta tar sands fame on my way to hot and dry Dallas, Texas, where they are decrying the building of Keystone XL pipeline. The zig-zag routing was meant to cut cost.

Transit time, however, might be fine for teenagers and the adventurous young adult but for those who are frequently restroom-challenged, we can't wait 'til we get to the diaper stage!

Zhongguoren Zue and Zu Yi from Shenyang to Beijing attached to their cellphones was par for the course to their cousins in Vancouver, home to one of the largest Chinatowns in the world, equipped with the latest from Samsung, Huawei, Nokia, and LG. Joseph and Josephine in Calgary were not exactly cuddled up in the corner either. They, too, were busy checking relations if everything was bonny well good. In Dallas, no-way-Jose was really out of the way as Josie kept talking with the ferocity of one still holding fort at the Alamo. We design our lives around the cellphone.

I am in Bonham, Texas, a few miles to the Oklahoma-Texas border by the Red River that flows into the Mississippi before it spews out to the delta and the Gulf of Mexico. On my farewell trip to North America, I am meeting for the last time with a covenant group I joined mid-'80s called the Realistic Living Institute. We tend to be big on human consciousness, not in its meta-use but in its common practical face. I will have to write about the group in another article to describe the corporate effort and give it full justice.

Suffice it to say that with a group committed to a week of introspection, meditation, and contemplation, the ubiquitous cellphone has not been silenced. Participants have a hard time shutting off the world for a week, focusing on themselves individually and as a corporate body. It is easier to go to the gym with all the machines and weights clanking the silence away. It takes more effort to flex the spirit in the gymnasium of the soul.

The smartphone is the Linus blanket of this generation, as the Texas male of an earlier time quickly drew his six-shooter, forsaking dialogue. The guys of my upbringing proudly palmed 9mm Beretta for comfort and safety with macho conceit and arrogant satisfaction. In the contrast of generations, I welcome the smartphone.

It's a long month-and-a-half of bidding adieu to loved ones from the shores of Chicago by the lake to the foothills of Oakland by the San Francisco Bay, greeting four grandchildren, two apiece in each place. Were I documenting a trip for the memory lane, the smartphone might be a great tool. But I'm just breezing through so I will let the old eyes and ears, nose and taste buds, with old-fashioned skin contact to register images into the cranium. That will do me just fine!

Sun Tzu meets the Heads Down Tribe

Even on a lousy day, you can always look at Saipan's lagoon and let the colors wash away your cares. It is, you'll agree, one of the world's best sights.

But it's not such a great view if your eyeballs fall apart. Fortunately, the odds of that are pretty slim. But let's tug on that yarn anyway, since it's part of a thread that runs through modern times.

A story recently hit world headlines about a guy who stared at his smartphone for so long that one of his eyeballs did, in fact, fall apart. The eyeball suffered from "retinal detachment."

According to the doctors, our peepers aren't designed to peer at little screens all day, especially in the dark.

Of course, just about anything out there can hurt you if your number comes up. Ladders, swimming pools, and olive pits are a few random examples. So I'm not picking on phones here, be they smart or anything else.

But smartphones can harbor a captivating quality. After all, you don't see many people climbing up and down ladders or sucking on olives all day just for the heck of it, but maybe it depends on the company you keep. By contrast, constant engagement with smartphones is so common it's probably not even noteworthy.

But it used to be. Noteworthy, that is. Last year in this space I took a look at a term that was growing in popularity in Asia: "Heads Down Tribe." That's so named, of course, for the slumped nogginns of smartphone viewers. Just from anecdotal evidence, I'll submit that this gig is no mere passing fad, but is, instead, just one data point on an upward trend of downwards heads.

In some cases, the elapsed time from someone being introduced to me to the point at which they pull out a smartphone to show me

CUC in fiscal shambles!

The utility agency is in deep fiscal hole as it now juggles which bills to pay amidst shrinking financial resources. Does it pay federal district court order on the $64 million fine, $42 million debt with CDA, buy fuel to keep the Saipan power plant humming or sputtering or pay its staff?

Half the mess is debts owed the utility agency. The balance is the lack of vision and competence on the part of management to rein in the combined use of fossil fuel and alternative energy. Its inability to make necessary repair at the power plant or buy vital parts places the island power system at the brink of likely brownouts for many moons to come. Are these fools planning to burn bunker fuel? Is the system equipped with stacks and scrubbers compliant with EPA regulations?

Some six years ago or so, I recall (as DPL secretary) availing some $3.5 million in loan via MPLT to CUC. That cushioned the system's repair by a private firm while placing smaller generators to power the island while it worked on major repair work.

Nothing else has happened when power generation returned to normal. We even ignored planning for a more reliable, stable and affordable system for four long years.

Here we are today at the edge of another rain-and-fire dance or bonfire to light up our houses outside until it dies off at midnight. Didn't some private firm offer the answer some four years ago? Notice now how important it is to "Plan For" rather than "Plan By" eventualities?

'Everybody Loves Raymond'

When Buddy Magoo does the reverse visit (comes to my lanai at home), it's usually a warning that he's found something of substance and wants to slug it out in a debate over coffee.

He's ultra-critical of the incumbent administration and I had to deflate his overblown ego by tripping him with threats like the need to do "due diligence." It was my only way to ease the raucous discussion and guide it into sensible decorum. But he wasn't prepared to grant me my day near the lemon tree.

Said he, "Braddah, the inevitable narrative that confirms reality everywhere is that this administration may be a unique political talent but a staggering disaster when it comes down to actually governing."

He doubled up asserting, "The incumbent must have vastly underestimated the complexity of the job." He noted that the governor is known as an accounting wizard, "yet he'd leave behind a legacy of bankruptcy!" A powerful and in your face observation! By this time my protective shields are down and useless.

Also noted that the "shovel-ready boys" (wrecking crew) haven't been of much use, woefully helpless struggling to justify accountability for their heinous disregard of the voice of the people on casino. But they share the governor's impulse for half-cocked investments.

Said Magoo, "Ah, da guys have alienated themselves and in their own bubble. The taint of corruption has started to stink up on their relics such that they've lost depth of perception on most every significant issue." Gee! It's another sterling assertion that leaves no room for refutation.

Sad how we've honed living beyond our means as to incur habitual annual deficits, the cumulative debt piling to a little over $1.2 billion today. Would leadership step up to the plate? "Everybody Loves Raymond!"

something is about two minutes, if not less. I guess it makes sense: The smartphone is, among other things, a miniature version of a briefcase, so you can have your entire photo album, product catalog, and so on neatly tucked away in your pocket.

It's certainly amazing technology. Maybe someday the old-fashioned briefcase will disappear entirely, joining the top hat and spittoon in the relics realm.

But smartphones might not always be the best answer for every situation. For example, last year I was at a gathering of amateur astronomers. Some folks dropped by the event to see if they could have a look-see through the telescopes. A line formed at my scope to see Jupiter and four of its moons, and Jupiter was showing big, bright, and juicy.

Things were moving along nicely until one guy took a look through the eyepiece and declared, "Whoa! I gotta' see this on the Internet."

Disregarding the line of people waiting behind him, he pulled out a smartphone and started looking up pictures of Jupiter. Apparently, Jupiter did not exist until an electronic screen validated its presence.

The guy stood there, unyielding, in a hypnotic phone-trance, scrolling through pictures of Jupiter.

And he stood. And he scrolled.

And he stood some more. And he scrolled some more.

Somebody in line prodded him with a polite hint.

He didn't catch it.

Cazart! Even mighty Jupiter, the Roman god of all the other gods, is no match for the Heads Down Tribe. As you can expect, then, a queue of mere mortals awaiting their turn at the eyepiece didn't stand a chance.

Shovel-ready bankruptcy

As we stretch political niceties, we dig a wider and deeper fiscal hole convinced it's the "shovel-ready" project of the NMI. Drowning helplessly in bankruptcy since recent past, we're now asking which way is up! Does it matter for the wrecking crew donning arrogance sinking both government and families into the deep sea of bankruptcy?

With families robbed of their buying power right smack in the middle of the cost of living skyrocketing, would they ably spend themselves into wealth? Would not this condition sink them further into the pits of misery when their stagnant income is forcibly reduced by the vicious increase in the cost of most everything from food, health insurance, and power bills, to other obligations?

Oversight on PSS

It's very unsettling to know that 90 percent of students who take NMC's entrance exam flunk the test. It's a tale that new students are woefully weak with words and numbers. As such, NMC carries the burden of failure in the public school system. It must expend money, time, and energy referring ill-prepared high school graduates to take non-degree units or remedial work. The music of seeming inconsequence plays on, including the Legislature's education committees. Disturbing!

We know that education is "not about producing salutary test scores; rather, it is about teaching. Test scores are a component of the process of teaching and learning, but when it becomes an all-consuming pas-

For some retirees, think about this

If these casino guys from Hong Kong were legitimate, they would have a business record going back years, a gaming background, or at least some vested interest in the industry. The truth is that until Feb. 24, 2014, their corporation was named First Natural Foods Holding Ltd. and they did no business in the gaming industry at all. This governor and this Legislature and this government is being bought. You retirees are being prostituted by them for their own selfish ends and it's probably our Public School System that is to blame because you retirees can't comprehend what is being done to you and can't do the math needed to see that this won't fix your problem. All you see is getting your 25 percent in July. You are 'dupes' for this government. Nothing more, nothing less.

Ask yourself, what happens after I get back my 25 percent? Has

I sure didn't want to take any chances. So rather than risk provoking any weirdness, I just covered up the scope and slinked away for coffee. And, come to think of it, for doughnuts, too. After all, there are few problems that can't be solved by coy retreat and a jelly-filled glazed, so when the going gets tough, you can find me at the intersection of Sun Tzu and Winchell's.

Speaking of retreat, I'll step back to fit this big idea on the conceptual horizon: There's something about the electronic screen that makes it seem more compelling than reality itself.

Perhaps it's in the presentation. After all, reality itself can be a messy and chaotic affair. But on the other hand, by way of clean contrast, a well-arranged screen seems authoritative by dint of being organized and orderly. Or, uh, something like that. I don't really know. Your guess is certainly better than mine. But there's something going on here, that's for sure.

Hopefully, we'll be able to go the remainder of the year without having to ponder this subject again. In the meantime, you can always enjoy the green gem of Managaha island amidst the blue hues of Saipan's lagoon. But after looking at that scene you should consult a smartphone just to, you know, see the real thing.

sion, the engine carrying a lot of children in its cars is liable to go off the rails." Imagine the humiliation these students would bring to colleges and universities between Guam and across the country.

What does an education official do when it is discovered that students are functioning at low proficiency levels? Rogue elements will consider cheating as a possibility.

Others will lower the standards until low proficiency rates start to look good again—social promotion—that doesn't do justice to students' education. PSS needs to reset its buttons on this score and focus on probing what went wrong in the obvious test scores confirming current education as egregiously flawed.

The focus of education will then have to shift to real teaching, which requires that teachers, and not test scores, are in control of what transpires in classrooms. It is time the CNMI vested its trust in teachers, not through rhetoric but through policy changes that empower teachers. Give teachers full rein and real respect, and the CNMI once more attain instilling academic competence among our students.

that would allow fishery managers to delay rebuilding unhealthy stocks and could keep fish populations at very low levels. Our local people depend on our natural resources for our livelihoods, and this requires healthy fish populations.

Thank you Kilili your leadership and standing up for the local people that depend on you to be our voice in Washington, D.C. The key conservation provisions of the MSA have proven successful and they should remain.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open letter to Mr. Gary Dubrall

My dear friend: I cannot help but disagree with you when you said that "I am part of the problem, not part of the solution" (May 23, 2014, Saipan Tribune and Marianas Variety). You got it all backwards—"You are part of the problem, I am part of the solution." Too often, a new visitor to our island will tell us: "This is good for you," "You cannot do that," "That's not how we do it," etc. I am sure they mean well with good intention. But how in the world would they know what is good for us when they just got here? You fit those characteristics, for you are smart, seems to know all the answers, and insisting "one size shoe fits all" mentality.

Our Carolinian elders would definitely label you as "mwaal ye esoor scheel faschal." Sorry, this old dumb "bigot" does not know how to translate "mwaal ye esoor scheel faschal" into a foreign (forked) tongue.

If I seem to impose my belief on you, it was never my intention to do so. I sincerely apologize to you and to others that I may have offended, if that indeed is the case.

You do not have to believe me, but I am sometimes invited to share my rich Carolinian cultural heritage with those who are curious and interested to know about us. A majority of these people are not from the island. We usually end up good friends afterwards, and I immensely enjoy sharing my heritage with them! I am inspired by their stories as well. To mention a few: I've shared with elementary school children, junior high school students, college students, in Guam and elsewhere, and as a cast member of the Honolulu Theater for Youth in the production of a play, Song for Navigator, a play that celebrates the people of Micronesia. Song for Navigator was so well received that it was accepted into the prestigious Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C. Also, the entire cast was invited by the Australian government, all expenses paid, to perform in Adelaide the following year, where the play eventually ended. I helped and encouraged my brother Pius "Mau" Pailug to share our sacred knowledge of the Carolinian celestial navigation with our native Hawaiian friends, to the people of Polynesia, and to the world, for that matter. The University of Hawaii board of regents bestowed an honorary doctoral degree on Mau for all that he did and contributed to the humanities. I only helped in a small way, for I was there and wrote his acceptance speech.

I usually keep things to myself, but I sincerely hope the above will help to show that I am not imposing my beliefs on anyone. Rather, this is a struggle to keep my simple life simple and my identity as a human being in a high-tech, modern time.

Do we need to forget our ancestral history, be it American or world history? I need that history in written or oral form to guide me and make me a good person in 2014 and beyond. You compare us with the KKK. These are white supremacist KKK. I'm brown KKK. We are very different in spirit and belief, and we do not hang black people simply because they are black. You are not going to see a Carolinian showing off his "personal" excellence, like you do, in the newspaper either. You really do not know us, and you will continue to confuse yourself by comparing us with others.

You ask me if I "try to heal the divisions in this [our] community?" As I have already mentioned, I also participated in public forum, with public education, as a guest speaker on traditional healing, at village meetings, etc. and will continue with that struggle to bring healing, good spirit, peace, and harmony to our island community and elsewhere. It's an old, old, Carolinian teaching and belief! But then you don't have to believe me.

Since we've never met, I am personally inviting you and sincerely hope you join me at our house in Chalan Kanoa behind the former Pacific Gardenia to share some of our stories in hopes of bringing peace, harmony, and understanding.

Eternally grateful

Thank you for being compromising and submissive
That kind of civility and perceived harmony are really quite impressive

Thank you for being so selfish and easily misled
The level of stress and discomfort continues to be very wide-spread

Thank you for increasing fear through manipulation, deceit, and disrespect
The discord and despair it creates makes for a long list of easy targets

Thank you for increasing the mortality and morbidity rate
That upward trend is as inevitable as your fate

Thank you for having and welcoming so many thieves and liars
They're countless now with some who are leaders and others well-admired

Thank you for all those things you do
That keep the legions growing and in keeping their strength renewed

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wolf bearing gifts

Eulogio Inos is again playing “wolf bearing gifts” politics to get votes from retirees by assuring retirees they will get back their 25 percent. Let’s not be fooled by his politricks “that the checks for the restoration of the retirees’ 25-percent cut are already being prepared.” With two pending lawsuits filed by two taxpayers challenging the legality of the Saipan casino law, how can he be preparing the checks? Let alone promising government employees that he will restore the within-grade increase. These promises are very irritating to our ears because we know that they are just promises meant to be broken after the election!

Anyone can immediately figure out that the $15 million per year casino mess can’t permanently restore retirees’ 25-percent cut because there are other CNMI problems that need to be fixed. This amount is just a drop in the bucket because it is a sweetheart deal. At the same time, Eulogio Inos is also trying to fool the casino applicants that one of them will get a totally exclusive casino license.

The numbers just don’t add up. For $15 million per year in license fees, Eulogio Inos wants the people of the CNMI to believe that it will solve the Retirement Fund problems that Eulogio Inos, as governor, created when he agreed to cut the retirees pension by 25 percent. The $15 million is not enough to even pay the Betty Johnson guaranteed commitment of up to $45 million per year!

The Tinian and Rota senators who voted yes to the Saipan casino were tricked. They were enticed and duped into believing that they each have $2 million to appropriate. A closer look at the casino law, however, clearly shows that the $2 million will all go to the Tinian and Rota retirees’ pension and the 25-percent cut, although it is not clear whether the 25-percent cut will be restored retroactively. That means no slush fund for the Tinian and Rota Legislative Delegations.

The Saipan and Northern

Islands Legislative Delegation, however, will get $1 million slush fund. Smart? Not! Recently, I visited a family member who was admitted to the hospital. I was so disgusted that the air conditioner in the patient rooms are not working, the televisions look so antique, there is no cafeteria, nurses and staff are underpaid, not enough doctors, etc. Despite all these problems, those who voted yes to secret deals with casinos have the audacity to reserve for their wasteful appropriation $1 million slush fund?

Not only are they trying to fool us, but Eulogio Inos and his casino legislators are also trying to fool the two casino applicants. Section 106(a) of Public Law 18-43 says that “An applicant for a license under this Act shall pay a one-time nonrefundable application fee of one million dollars.”

Furthermore, Section 106(e) of Public Law 18-43 says that “The applicant who is granted an exclusive license under this Act shall make an initial investment of at least two billion dollars, to include a casino and a resort with a minimum of 2,000 guest rooms.”

First, the “exclusive casino license” is only exclusive under Public Law 18-43. But, nothing prohibits future legislatures from giving other casino licenses under another Act. Second, the $2 billion initial investment does not require that it be made in the CNMI. Third, the 2,000 guest-room requirement does not specify what the minimum size of the rooms must be. Fourth, neither Public Law 18-38 or Public Law 18-43 specify when the $2 billion initial investment must be made by, and when the 2,000 guest-room must be built by.

In my previous letter to the editor, I challenged the yes-to-casino legislators to sign affidavits to show that he or she did not receive anything over $50 in exchange for a yes vote. As of this writing, none of the yes-to-casino legislators have taken the challenge. I renew that challenge again.

At the end of the day, my prediction is that the exclusive casino license “under this Act” will be given to Best Sunshine, as planned. Just you wait and see.

Joint Region Marianas remembers Battle of Midway

ASAN, Guam—Joint Region Marianas sailors and staff commemorated the 72nd anniversary of the Battle of Midway at the command headquarters in Asan on June 3.

The event, hosted by JRM's junior officers, included a presentation that detailed the importance of intelligence, leadership, and timing that led to victory.

The battle, which took place June 4-7, 1942, has been referred to as the most important campaign during World War II. With victory at Midway, the allies gained an offensive advantage against Japan that helped pave the way for the United States to win the war in the Pacific.

"It's important to remember

Midway because if we had lost this battle, American life as we know it would be completely different," said Lt. Loumarie Chew, the command current operations officer. "The outcome of World War II and the occupation of Guam might have been different. They always say 'the battles win the war,' and this is a good example of that."

JRM Chief Operations Specialist Damiean Williams attended the event and said it served as an outstanding opportunity to learn more about the history of the significant campaign.

"The only way you can know where you're going is to know where you came from," he said.

"Being in the military, it's important to know our background. Battles like Midway, World War II, great naval battles, that's all a part of our history."

Command Program Analyst Sarah Schumacher said the event was a good way to remind staff of their shared mission.

"JRM is an administrative organization and sometimes employees may forget the valuable role they play in the defense of our nation," she said. "The Battle of Midway commemoration reinforced that we all support, 'one team, one fight.' Personally, I took away lessons about leadership, teamwork and rising from a fall — just some remarkable foundations that make me proud to be an American." (PR)

If you are looking for a special gift for someone, or just wanting something exotic to liven up your home or garden, venture over to the new Vietnam Home Gallery and have a look.

The Gallery's grand opening takes place Monday, June 9, starting at 9am.

Conveniently located on Middle Road in Gualo Rai, Vietnam Home Gallery is just North of Quartermaster Road and south of the Transamerica building, on the first floor of the Brother's Acupuncture clinic.

Saipan's newest store for your home and garden needs carries fine ceramics, live potted plants, vases, carvings, and other beautiful home furnishings imported from Southeast Asia. This shipment, store manager Loc Thi Vu said features a wide array of carefully selected beautifully glazed pots, bowls, and vases from throughout Vietnam.

All are reasonably priced and large items can be delivered to your door. Special orders are not a problem, so long as patrons provide a picture or description of what they want and their price range.

"My friends and I love growing and caring for plants, but most shops carry plastic pots," said Vu. "Plants do much better in clay or ceramic, especially orchids. They deserve to be planted in something as beautiful as they are."

Taiwan's Star TV explores Saipan, Tinian

An estimated 10 million viewers in Taiwan, Hong Kong, China, and Singapore recently had the opportunity to learn about the Northern Mariana Islands as Taiwan's Star TV Cooking My Way features Saipan and Tinian.

Cooking My Way was on Saipan to capture the 16th Annual Taste of the Marianas International Food Festival & Beer Garden, which concluded on Saturday, May 31. The show focuses on gourmet food and travel.

"Thanks to last year's Public Law 18-1 and its increase in the hotel occupancy tax, the Marianas Visitors Authority has been able to use that additional funding to open and operate a representative office in Taiwan and attract more media FAM tours such as 'Cooking My Way,'"

Media representatives of Taiwan Star TV's "Cooking My Way" mingle with dinner show performers at the Fiesta Resort & Spa on May 14, 2014. MVA said MVA marketing manager Bruce Bateman. "We will continue to make our presence known in Taiwan and increase awareness of our islands as a vacation destination."

On Saipan, the group filmed at the 16th Annual Taste of the Marianas, Tony Roma's, 360 Revolving Restaurant, Coffee Room N106, and the Fiesta Resort & Spa dinner show. Other activities included a submarine tour, marine sports at Managaha, shopping, poolside barbecue, a discovery flight, golf at Laolao Bay Golf & Resort, and snorkeling at Grotto. The Saipan-based episode aired on May 31, 2014, and had a large viewing audience.

On Tinian, the group toured the Tinian Blow Hole and House of Taga. Also on the itinerary was hot pepper processing, crab kelaguen, poolside massage, Chamorro dance, fishing, snorkeling, beach barbecue, bugging riding, horseback riding, and sashimi processing. There will be a separate episode that focuses only on Tinian that will air this Saturday, June 7.

The group lodged at Hyatt Regency Saipan, Tinian Dynasty Hotel & Casino, and Mango Resort from May 10 to 15, 2014.

Star TV Cooking My Way has already put up a number of video clips on YouTube. One can be accessed at: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=lvx5pSqR2Zk>. Others can be accessed from the suggested videos list on the same page. (MVA) ing from elementary and middle school, to high school students who have gained regional accolades in the past year.

According to Education Commissioner Dr. Rita A. Sablan, the annual celebration is an effort to continually promote the performing arts in public schools.

"We are honored to be surrounded by these talented artists. Their coordinators and mentors are doing a lot with what little they have," she said. "The students have succeeded not just in the CNMI but in Guam and elsewhere in our region."

Garapan Elementary School's Mallard Band, Koblerville Elementary School's Umang Glee Club, and Out Of the Ordinary opened the night's event.

Garapan Elementary School student Lawrence Tubera drew much applause for his cover of Journey's Faithfully. "I enjoyed performing tonight. The best part of it was when I was done and everyone clapped. I am glad I could sing for everyone," he told Saipan Tribune.

The festival also featured Hopwood Jr. High School's Hip-Hopwood Rock band, which drew loud cheers and applause from the audience.

Saipan Southern High School's Flow and Manta Ray Concert band was an obvious favorite.

Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan was present at the event to support the youth. "I was here last year and I always enjoy myself. Students are my favorite people. I see the talent and energy and it brings hope for our future," he said.

Mikhail Alcantara, Flow band member, said his group was honored to perform for PSS officials and members of the community.

"These kinds of activities are important to showcase our future artists and the CNMI's talent. All of the groups are award winning," he said.

Marianas High School also brought to the stage four groups: MHS Concert Band, Glee/Rhythm 'n' Harmony, Prep Band, and the Pocksai Chamorro Chorale.

One audience member, Victoria Nishida, told Saipan Tribune that the event "was an awesome experience."

"It is good to see kids busy with things like this. It is really good for them and the community. It also develops their self-confidence and will give them a better future," she added.

Will that be a 6-bedroom suite or just a couch?

By SCOTT MAYEROWITZ and
CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
AP BUSINESS WRITERS

NEW YORK (AP)—Private elevators, personal shopping assistants, six-bedroom suites with their own postal codes. Even helipads. This is what the super-rich have come to expect from hotels.

For others, vacation now means renting someone's apartment, a spare room, maybe just a couch—anything to save on the cost of a hotel.

As the gap between the wealthiest travelers and everyone else has widened, so has the way people are experiencing vacations. The wealthy are looking for ever-more pampering. Many others are seeking new ways to economize.

And the lodging industry is adapting—at the high and low ends—to meet the diverging needs.

Luxury hotels are catering to financial elites from Russia, China, Brazil or the Middle East who now routinely hop around the world and don't mind dropping $20,000 a night for a glamorous accommodation.

"High-end travel in the air, on the sea and on land has never been more robust," says Steve Carvell, an associate dean at Cornell University's School of Hotel Administration. "There are more people with more concentrated wealth."

Luxury hotels are arising even at iconic middle-American tourism spots such as Walt Disney World. Four Seasons will open a 444-room resort there in August with 68 suites, including a nine-bedroom royal suite sporting a 1,000 square-foot (93-square-meter) private terrace with views of the park's nightly fireworks.

During the Great Recession, many resorts dropped "resort and spa" from their name. The idea was to appeal to corporate organizers who didn't want trips to seem extravagant. Excess now appears back in style.

In November, Four Seasons added the phrase "and residences" to its mountain resorts in Vail, Colorado; Jackson Hole, Wyoming; and Whistler, Canada. It's pursuing families seeking a residential experience with the pampering of a hotel staff.

The six-bedroom suite in Vail fetches $15,000 a night. You get three living rooms and a movie room. The suite includes a dedicated assistant who can arrange airport transfers, private ski lessons and after-hours shopping.

The return of extravagance reflects one characteristic of the recovery: After paring their vacations along with everyone else during the recession, the wealthy have rebounded with force. Since 2009, hotel spending by the wealthiest 20 percent of Americans has risen about 6 percent, according to inflation-adjusted data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The middle 20 percent are still spending nearly 3 percent less.

To stretch their discretionary dollars, middle-income vacationers are fueling one of the industry's growth areas: "limited service" lodgings. At Marriott's Fairfield Inn, Hyatt Place and Holiday Inn Express, you get free Wi-Fi and breakfast. But there's no bellman, concierge or restaurants.

The idea is to draw travelers who feel priced out of full-service hotels. People can still say, "I'm staying at the Marriott," even if it's the Fairfield Inn, says Bjorn Hanson, dean of New York University's hospitality school.

But many people are seeking deeper savings through increasingly popular sites such as Airbnb that arrange for people to rent rooms or apartments. The number of listed accommodations has soared since Airbnb's founding in 2008 to 550,000—not far below Hilton's 685,000 rooms worldwide. Some studies suggest that Airbnb could be cutting into budget hotels' revenue.

Fed survey U.S. Economy improving

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP ECONOMICS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Federal Reserve survey shows the U.S. economy strengthening over the past two months in areas from manufacturing and construction to retail sales and bank lending.

Seven of the Fed's 12 regions—Boston, New York, Richmond, Chicago, Minneapolis, Dallas and San Francisco—reported "moderate" growth during the early spring, while the remaining five described growth as "modest," according to the Beige Book survey released Wednesday.

Retail sales were reviving, helped by pent-up demand for new cars after the harsh winter, the survey found. Manufacturing was expanding in all regions, along with lending. One weakness was home sales, held back in large part by a tight supply of available homes.

The Beige Book is based on anecdotal reports from businesses and will be considered along with other data when Fed policymakers meet June 17-18.

Nothing in the report is likely to alter the widespread view that the Fed thinks the economy is reviving after a winter slowdown.

"The picture painted by the collective anecdotes in today's Beige Book may not illustrate robust growth, but it suggests the economy is at least moving in the right direction," said Dana Saporita, an economist at Credit Suisse.

Jennifer Lee, senior economist at BMO Capital Markets, said it marked the 24th time out of 28 reports going back to early 2011 that the Fed has used "modest," "moderate" or often both words to describe the economy.

Economists generally believe the Fed in June will pare its pace of monthly bond purchases by another $10 billion and pledge to keep its key short-term interest rate at a record low near zero for a "considerable" period after its bond purchases end.

Last of original group of Navajo Code Talkers dies

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP)—The language he once was punished for speaking in school became Chester Nez’s primary weapon in World War II.

Before hundreds of men from the Navajo Nation became Code Talkers, Nez and 28 others were recruited to develop a code based on the then-unwritten Navajo language. Locked in a room for 13 weeks, they came up with an initial glossary of more than 200 terms using Navajo words for red soil, war chief, braided hair and hummingbird, for example, and an alphabet.

Nez never tired of telling the story to highlight his pride in having served his country and stress the importance of preserving the Navajo language. The 93-year-old died Wednesday morning of kidney failure with plenty of appearances still scheduled, said Judith Avila, who helped Nez publish his memoirs. He was the last of the original group of 29 Navajo Code Talkers.

“It’s one of the greatest parts of history that we used our own native language during World War II,” Nez told The Associated Press in 2009. “We’re very proud of it.”

Navajo President Ben Shelly ordered flags lowered across the reservation in honor of Nez from sunrise Thursday to sunset Sunday.

Nez was in 10th grade when he lied about his age to enlist in the U.S. Marine Corps not knowing he would become part of an elite group of Code Talkers. He wondered whether the code would work since the Japanese were skilled code breakers.

Few non-Navajos spoke the Navajo language, and even those who did couldn’t decipher the code. It proved impenetrable. The Navajos trained in radio communications were walking copies of it. Each message read aloud by a Code Talker immediately was destroyed.

“The Japanese did everything in their power to break the code but they never did,” Nez said in the AP interview.

Nez grew up speaking only Navajo in Two Wells, New Mexico, on the eastern side of the Navajo Nation. He gained English as a second language while attending boarding school, where he had his mouth washed out with soap for speaking Navajo.

When a Marine recruiter came looking for young Navajos who were fluent in Navajo and English to serve in World War II, Nez said he told his roommate “let’s try it out.” The dress uniforms caught his attention, too.

“They were so pretty,” Nez said.

About 250 Navajos showed up at Fort Defiance, then a U.S. Army base. But only 29 were selected to join the first all-Native American unit of Marines. They were inducted in May 1942 and became the 382nd Platoon tasked with developing the code. At the time, Navajos weren’t even allowed to vote.

After World War II, Nez volunteered to serve two more years during the Korean War. He retired in 1974 after a 25-year career as a painter at the Veterans Affairs hospital in Albuquerque. His artwork featuring 12 Navajo holy people was on display at the hospital.

For years, Nez’s family and friends knew only that he fought the Japanese during World War II.

Nez was eager to tell his family more about his role as a Code Talker, Avila said, but he couldn’t. Their mission wasn’t declassified until 1968.

The accolades came much later. The original group received Congressional Gold Medals in 2001 and Nez often joked about pawning his. He measured the accuracy of the movie “Windtalkers,” based on the Code Talkers that came out the following year, at 78 percent and said the Navajo spoken by Adam Beach was hard to understand but “he tried his best.”

Nez

Code Talkers have appeared on television and at parades and they are routinely asked to speak to veterans groups and students. They are celebrated on the Navajo Nation with a tribal holiday.

Nez threw the opening pitch at a 2004 Major League Baseball game and offered a blessing for the presidential campaign of John Kerry. In 2012, he received a bachelor’s degree from the University of Kansas, where he abandoned his studies in fine arts decades ago after tuition assistance he received for his military service ran out.

U.S. Sens. Tom Udall and Martin Heinrich, and Rep. Ben Ray Lujan, of New Mexico, praised Nez for his bravery and service to the United States in a statement Wednesday. The Code Talkers took part in every assault the Marines conducted in the Pacific, sending thousands of messages without error on Japanese troop movements and battlefield tactics.

Military jet crash sets homes ablaze in California
IMPERIAL, Calif. (AP)—A Marine jet crashed into a residential area in a Southern California desert community Wednesday, exploding and setting two homes on fire. The pilot ejected safely, and there was no immediate word of any injuries on the ground. The Harrier AV-8B went down at 4:20 p.m. in Imperial, a city of about 15,000 near the U.S.-Mexico border about 90 miles east of San Diego. Witnesses described an explosion and thick plumes of smoke. “It felt like a bomb was thrown in the backyard of the house,” said Adriana Ramos, 45, whose home is less than a block from the crash scene. “The whole house moved.”

Bergdahl’s hometown cancels celebration amid furor
HAILEY, Idaho (AP)—Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl’s hometown abruptly canceled plans Wednesday for a welcome-home celebration, citing security concerns over the prospect of big crowds—both for and against the soldier. The town of 8,000 has been swamped with hate mail and angry calls over Bergdahl, whose release after five years of Taliban captivity in Afghanistan has touched off a debate over whether the 28-year-old should be given a hero’s welcome or punished as a deserter. Meanwhile, the Taliban released a 17-minute video of his handover showing a thin, tense-looking Bergdahl being patted down for explosives by U.S. forces before climbing aboard an American helicopter in the dusty Afghanistan desert. Just before he was turned over, one of his Taliban captors leaned in and warned him: “Don’t come back to Afghanistan. You won’t make it out alive next time.” His captors waved goodbye as he was led away.

Police arrest man in elevator stabbing of boy, 6
NEW YORK (AP)—A man believed to have stabbed a 6-year-old boy to death and critically injured a 7-year-old girl in a knife attack in a public housing building elevator that didn’t have security cameras was arrested Wednesday just minutes after the mayor and the police commissioner publicly identified him and appealed for help catching him, police said. Daniel St. Hubert was picked up just after 8 p.m. in a residential neighborhood in Queens in connection with the death of Prince Joshua Avitto and the injuring of Mikayla Capers days earlier in Brooklyn, authorities said. No details were provided on how St. Hubert, 27, was captured.

Mourning, tight security on Tiananmen anniversary

BEIJING (AP)—Yin Min held the ashes of her son and wept, she said, as she marked 25 years since he was killed in the crackdown by Chinese tanks and troops on protests at Tiananmen Square. Outside, guards kept a close eye on her home while police blanketed central Beijing to block any public commemoration of one of the darkest chapters in recent Chinese history.

"How has the world become like this? I don't even have one bit of power. Why must we be controlled so strictly this year?" Yin said in a telephone interview. "I looked at his ashes, I looked at his old things, and I cried bitterly."

China allows no public discussion of the events of June

3-4, 1989, when soldiers backed by tanks and armored personnel carriers fought their way into the heart of Beijing, killing hundreds, possibly thousands, of unarmed protesters and onlookers.

On Wednesday, scores of police and paramilitary troops patrolled the vast plaza and surrounding streets in Beijing's heart, stopping vehicles and demanding identification from passers-by. Chinese censors scrubbed domestic blogs and social media websites of comments marking the crackdown.

The silence in the mainland about the anniversary of a pivotal event that shocked the world contrasted with boisterous commemorations in Hong Kong.

Large crowds gathered Wednesday night in the city's Victoria Park for an annual candlelight vigil to remember the Tiananmen victims, holding candles aloft that turned the vast area into a sea of flickering light.

Activists laid a wreath at a makeshift memorial as the names and biographical details of people killed in the crackdown were read out. Organizers said more than 180,000 people took part, with many overflowing into the streets around the park's main entrance.

Elsewhere, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry urged China to release those jailed in connection with the events. "For all people who seek freedom, Tiananmen Square still stirs our conscience," he said in a statement.

Some relatives of the crackdown's victims in Beijing were allowed to pay their respects at cemeteries—but only with police escorts. Others did so at home under surveillance, expressing frustration at the restrictions placed on their remembrances.

Indian girl, 13, becomes youngest to climb Everest

NEW DELHI (AP)—The 13-year-old daughter of poor Indian farmers who became the youngest girl to climb Mount Everest said Wednesday that she "shed joyful tears" at the summit after a grueling climb across difficult terrain and personal fear.

Nepal requires climbers to be at least 16 years old to scale its peaks, but Malavath Pooma said she and a team of Nepalese guides climbed the 8,850-meter (29,035-foot) mountain on May 25 from the northern side in Tibet. There are no age restrictions in China.

"It was very difficult. Every step is a dangerous step," a smiling Pooma told reporters in New Delhi, describing steep slopes, exposed rocks, deep crevasses and extreme cold that went below minus 40 degrees Celsius (minus 40 Fahrenheit).

At 3,300 meters (10,830 feet), she said she saw "six dead bodies. I was shocked. Oh my god I got some fear."

But she remembered her training and regained her confidence.

"When I reached the top of Everest, very good experience. I feel great and proud, and I shed joyful tears" as she looked around and saw "mighty mountains and morning sunlight," she said in English, waving her hands expressively as she spoke.

The climb was verified by the China Tibet Mountaineering Association in Lhasa, making Malavath the youngest girl to climb Everest. American Jordan Romero, from Big Bear, California, became the youngest boy at age 13 to reach the summit—also from the Tibetan side—in 2010.

Ruling party, rival split S. Korean vote

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—South Korean President Park Geun-hye's conservative ruling party and its liberal rival split key races in local elections that analysts say ended in a tie amid rising public indignation over the government's handling of April's deadly ferry sinking.

With nearly all votes counted Thursday morning, candidates affiliated with Park's Saenuri Party won eight of 17 important mayoral and provincial governor races, while opposition candidates took the other nine. The local posts are often springboards for future national leaders.

"This time, there is no winner and no loser," said Prof. Hong Sung Gul from Seoul's Kookmin University.

In some sense, the ruling party was seen as having fared well as it avoided a big defeat in elections widely seen as a measure of the public's feelings toward Park's government after the April 16 disaster that left more than 300 people dead or missing.

Analysts noted the ruling party could have done much better if the disaster had not happened. "The results weren't really good for a president who had just had a little more than a year in office," said Lee Cheol-hee, head of the private Doomun Political Strategy Institute in Seoul.

World

BOHEMIA, Jamaica (AP)—Howard Bailey joined the U.S. Navy straight out of high school in Brooklyn figuring he would see the world. He didn't expect to end up back in his native Jamaica, raising pigs and barely getting by in the poor village of his childhood.

The 43-year-old father of two was deported in May 2012 from the U.S. to his Caribbean homeland because he was convicted of a marijuana-related felony drug charge in 1997—despite the four years he served in the Navy, including a few months on a supply ship during the first Gulf War.

Weighed down by worry and bone-deep weariness, he wants to get back to his family and the future he thought he was building in Virginia. Bailey was a teenager when he and his siblings followed their mother to New York City as green card holders, and he long considered the United States his home.

"It's so hard," Bailey said, gesturing at a few rough-hewn pigpens and yam vines climbing up bamboo sticks. "I went from owning a successful trucking business and two homes in the U.S., paying my taxes, raising two beautiful children with a beautiful wife to, well, what you see here."

Bailey's case has drawn the attention of immigration lawyers and media because his crime seems relatively minor and the punishment extreme. But he's not unique: Thousands of non-citizens who served in the U.S. military have been deported to countries around the globe in recent years, immigrant advocates estimate. The precise number is unknown because the U.S. government does not track deportees by veteran status.

Some say the deportees deserve special consideration because of their military service. "We treated you as a national when you wore the uniform, we should treat you as one when it comes off," said Pennsylvania immigration attorney Craig Shagin, who assists a group for deportees called Banished Veterans.

If legal permanent residents die while serving in the U.S. military, they are granted a military funeral and citizenship. But if they finish their service without becoming naturalized and are later arrested, as Bailey was, they are subject to immigration laws passed in 1994 and 1996 that expanded the list of deportable offenses.

It's an uphill battle to return a deportee in Bailey's position to the U.S., said Alisa Wellek, who is assisting him as co-executive director of the New York-based Immigrant Defense Project. She said a legal advocacy project at Boston College has agreed to file a motion to reopen Bailey's immigration case so a judge can determine whether he deserves to stay in the U.S. as a green card holder, or legal resident. But the Department of Homeland Security will ultimately decide if the case is reopened.

U.S. government officials would not discuss specifics of Bailey's situation, citing privacy rules. Gillian Christensen, a spokeswoman for U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, said the agency "exercises prosecutorial discretion for members of the armed forces who have honorably served our country on a case-by-case basis when appropriate."

consequences of their actions," said Ira Mehlman, spokesman for the Washington-based Federation for American Immigration Reform.

In Jamaica, Bailey mulls over his "stupid mistake" and worries about his teenage children, a boy and girl living in Virginia. Once strong students, they are struggling in school.

Following his honorable discharge, Bailey, a communications specialist while in the Navy, was studying to become a dental assistant and living near Norfolk Naval Station when he was arrested in 1995. He was convicted in August 1997 of possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Bailey said he was duped into the crime by a fellow Jamaican who was serving in the Navy at the time. Hanging out near the Norfolk base, they bonded over music and he didn't think twice when his new buddy asked him to sign for a couple of packages at his home. But the parcels contained marijuana and was being tracked by law enforcement.

Two years later, Bailey followed his lawyer's advice and took a plea deal in Virginia Beach Circuit Court and admitted to a felony possession charge rather than risk a harsher penalty by going to trial. He served 15 months in a Virginia lockup and thought that was the end of it.

But when he applied for U.S. citizenship in 2005, immigration authorities were flagged by the conviction. Bailey was locked up in immigration detention centers for two years until 2012, when he boarded a plane with 70 other shackled Jamaicans and flown to the island's capital on a monthly U.S. flight nicknamed "Con Air."

Bailey shares his story with few people in Jamaica, where stigma against deportees is high and many people struggle to find work. His mother and siblings wire him money because he doesn't make nearly enough to support himself by raising just over a dozen pigs.

Syria's Assad wins presidential vote in landslide

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Syrian President Bashar Assad has been re-elected in a landslide, officials said Wednesday, capturing another seven-year term in the middle of a bloody 3-year-old uprising against his rule that has devastated the country.

Syria's parliament speaker, Jihad Laham, announced the final results from Tuesday's election, saying Assad garnered 10,319,723 votes, or 88.7 percent. Assad's two challengers, Hassan al-Nouri and Maher Hajjar, won 4.3 percent and 3.2 percent respectively. The Supreme Constitutional Court put turnout at 73.42 percent.

Assad's victory was always a foregone conclusion, despite the presence of other candidates on the ballot for the first time in decades. The opposition and its Western allies denounced the election as a farce, with U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry calling it a "great big zero."

Damascus erupted into a thunderous, rolling clap of celebratory gunfire that appeared to include heavy weaponry after the results were announced. Thousands of Assad supporters flocked the streets to celebrate, some waving large Syrian flags and others carrying photos of Assad as car horns blared. Some men broke into the familiar pro-Assad chant: "With our souls, with our blood, we sacrifice for you, Bashar!"

Rebels seize 3 government bases in eastern Ukraine

LUHANSK, Ukraine (AP)—Pro-Russian insurgents captured three government bases in eastern Ukraine in a series of humiliating defeats for the beleaguered armed forces on Wednesday, as the president-elect promised new initiatives to help end the mutiny in the country's industrial heartland. Petro Poroshenko, speaking in Warsaw after meeting with President Barack Obama and other Western leaders, rejected a call from Ukraine's interim authorities to introduce martial law in the restive east, saying he would seek to pacify the region with an offer of amnesty and a promise of early regional elections. Poroshenko's overture, expected to be detailed in his inaugural address on Saturday, came as the Ukrainian troops suffered a series of embarrassing setbacks on Wednesday.

3 officers killed, 2 injured in Canada shooting

MONCTON, New Brunswick (AP)—Three police officers were shot dead and two others injured in a rare case of gun violence in the east coast Canadian province of New Brunswick, officials said. Authorities were searching for a suspect. Royal Canadian Mounted Police Constable Damien Theriault said police responded to a call Wednesday about an armed man in the north end of the city of Moncton at 7:30 p.m. Three of the officers were killed and two sustained non-life threatening injuries and were in stable condition. "We are still actively looking for the shooter," Theriault said. "He is believed to still be in the Pinehurst subdivision area of Moncton. We are urging people in that area to stay inside and lock their doors and for people to say away from that area."

Russia's Putin dominates G-7 summit in absentia

BRUSSELS (AP)—Russian President Vladimir Putin was kept out of Wednesday's summit of world leaders but dominated the meeting as President Barack Obama and his counterparts from the G-7 group of major economies sought the Kremlin chief's renewed cooperation to end the Ukraine crisis. French President Francois Hollande said the meeting sent a clear signal of unity by urging Russia to help stabilize the situation in Ukraine, while keeping the threat of further sanctions on the table. In faraway Moscow, Putin seemed to shrug off the snub of having not been invited to Brussels, but declared he was still open to "dialogue." In March, the U.S. and its most important allies retaliated for Putin's military occupation and subsequent annexation of Ukraine's Crimean Peninsula by suspending Russia's membership in what had been the G-8 club of rich countries.

Israel doctors won't force-feed Palestinians

JERUSALEM (AP)—Proposed legislation to permit the force-feeding of Palestinian prisoners on hunger strike is pitting Israel's government against much of the country's medical community, including the main doctors' association which contends the practice amounts to torture. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has reportedly asked to fast-track the bill as a hunger strike by dozens of Palestinian detainees entered its sixth week. At least 65 of 290 participating detainees have been hospitalized since the first group began a hunger strike on April 24. Many are administrative detainees, held for months or years without charges.

German museum shows live replica of van Gogh's ear

By FRANK JORDANS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN (AP)—A German museum has put on display a copy of Vincent van Gogh's ear that was grown using genetic material provided by one of the 19th-century Dutch artist's living relatives.

The Center for Art and Media in Karlsruhe said artist Diemut

Strebe made the replica using living cells from Lieuwe van Gogh, the great-great-grandson of Vincent's brother Theo.

Using a 3D-printer, the cells were shaped to resemble the ear that Vincent van Gogh is said to have cut off during a psychotic episode in 1888.

"I use science basically like a type of brush, like Vincent used paint," Strebe told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Tuesday.

The U.S.-based artist said the ear, which was grown at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, is being kept alive inside a case containing a nourishing liquid and could theoretically last for years.

Convincing Lieuwe van Gogh to take part was easy. "He loved the project right away," said Strebe.

Lieuwe and Vincent van Gogh share about 1/16th of the same genes, including the Y-chromosome that is passed down the male lineage.

But hopes of using genetic material that belonged to the post-Impressionist master himself were dashed when DNA extracted from an envelope turned out to belong to someone else. "The postman messed it up," Strebe joked.

Still, work is underway with a female relative to include mitochondrial DNA—passed down the mother's line—for future installations.

The exhibition, at which visitors can speak into the ear through a microphone, lasts until July 6. Strebe said she plans to display the ear in New York next year.

Fake officer accused of pulling over a real one

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Police say a man impersonating an officer face charges after signaling a real detective to pull over on a road in Florida. St. Johns County authorities say 20-year-old Matthew Michael Lee McMahon activated a red and blue light Monday while driving behind an unmarked sheriff's car. Detective Chance Anderson pulled over and was shocked to see an unknown face behind the wheel of the other car. First Coast News reports that during his more than 10 years of service the detective has arrested several police impersonators. But none had ever ordered him to stop his car. McMahon is charged with impersonating an officer and unlawfully displaying blue lights. He was released Tuesday after posting $5,500 in bail. It wasn't clear whether he's hired an attorney.

Kia hamster actor charged with disability fraud

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A man who played a dancing hamster in Kia car commercials and was a backup dancer for Madonna has been charged with California disability fraud. The California Department of Insurance says 27-year-old Leroy Barnes of Los Angeles collected $51,000 in workers compensation benefits in 2010 and 2011. Barnes claimed he was disabled when a piece of ceiling fell on him. But the department says he made at least one Kia commercial, performed in a rap group, assisted in recording the song "Cat Daddy," and was a backup dancer for Madonna, Kelly Rowland and Chris Brown. Barnes was arrested last month and is free on bail. Insurance department spokeswoman Nancy Kincaid said she didn't know if he had a lawyer.

Man burns feces behind Seattle police station

SEATTLE (AP)—The No. 1 thing Seattle police officers noticed Sunday at the East Precinct station was a fire in the alley. The next thing was No. 2. A man told officers he had just relieved himself and was burning the feces. He said he did not know starting a fire was illegal and thought he did nothing wrong. Because there were nearby trash bins with paper, the 31-year-old man was arrested for reckless burning. The online police blotter says firefighters put out the fire and hosed down the alley. Police spokeswoman Renee Witt says there's nothing in the report to indicate why the man thought burning human waste behind the police station was a good idea, but he was not referred for a mental evaluation.

Spokane sheriff tells deputies, 'no sex on duty'

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—A Washington state sheriff has sent a memo to deputies telling them that sex on duty will not be tolerated. Spokane County Sheriff Ozzie Knezovich tells KREM he had to spell out the policy because a deputy he fired for the behavior won his job back last month in arbitration. The memo says that sex on duty is a breach of the public trust and a breach of the sheriff's office code of ethics, core values and officer safety.

Police: teen vandals call 911, are arrested

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP)—Police say a group of suspected teen vandals in New Mexico got so rattled when a crime victim chased after them they called 911 and were arrested as a result. KOAT-TV reports police say the teens, who range in age from 18 to 15, shot at several windshields with BB guns in a Santa Fe neighborhood, until one victim jumped in his car and followed them. Officials said the teens called 911, telling the dispatcher the car would speed up whenever they did. The teens face property damage and drug paraphernalia charges.

Apple expands into health, home with new software

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Apple is expanding into home and health management as the company tries to turn its iPhones, iPads and Mac computers into an interchangeable network of devices that serve as a hub of people's increasingly digital lives.

The new tools for tracking health and controlling household appliances are part of updated operating systems that Apple unveiled Monday in San Francisco at its 25th annual conference for application developers.

The revised software for Apple Inc.'s devices won't be released to the general public until this fall when the company is also expected to start selling the next generation of iPhones and iPads. A spruced-up line of Macs also could be coming before the holiday shopping season.

The lack of a flashy new gadget may disappoint some Apple fans who are still looking for proof that the company hasn't lost its ingenuity since Steve Jobs died in October 2011. Since then, Apple has mostly been making incremental improvements to the devices and software hatched under Jobs' leadership.

While those updates have been enough to maintain Apple's status as the world's most valuable company, they haven't quieted persisting questions about the company's future prospects amid intensifying competition from other device makers.

Apple CEO Tim Cook, Job's hand-picked successor, turned Monday's spotlight over to one of his chief lieutenants—Craig Federighi—to discuss the company's upcoming software changes. The new versions, which will be free, are called iOS 8 for mobile devices and "Yosemite" for Macs.

The iOS 8 operating system includes "HealthKit" and "HomeKit" options that may test how just how much Apple customers trust the Cupertino, California, company to maintain their privacy.

HealthKit works with a new built-in app on the iOS 8 that will store a variety of information about people's medical histories, vital signs, fitness levels and diet. Other third-party apps will be able to access the data with a user's permission.

HomeKit is aiming to set up a system that lets an iPhone or iPad serve as the remote control of an entire household outfitted with an assortment of digital appliances.

TECH Q&A

Her files are locked; who has the key?

By STEVE ALEXANDER
STAR TRIBUNE (MINNEAPOLIS)

QUESTION: A local repair shop fixed my PC after it was attacked by a virus, but a few days later I noticed that I couldn't open some of my documents and photos. The repair people don't know what happened, so I'm sending you some of my files. Can they be recovered?—Evelyn Trinidad, Miami Beach, Fla.

ANSWER: Although your photos are labeled as being in the JPEG format used by most digital cameras, my photo software says that they "not valid" JPEG files. Your Microsoft Word file can be opened, but contains only gibberish.

I believe that malicious software has encrypted, or coded, your files to make them unreadable. Programs that do this are called "ransomware" because they usually display a message that's the equivalent of a ransom note: If you want your files unencrypted, you have to pay the hackers responsible using a prepaid credit card (so that the transaction can't be canceled later.) If you pay, the hackers may or may not use an encryption key, which only they have, to unlock your files and return them to normal.

Since you haven't received the ultimatum, I think your computer repair people probably removed both the ransomware program and the ransom note when they cleaned your computer. This had the secondary effect of severing your only means of communicating with the hackers. As a result, your files will remain encrypted and are gone for good.

This is both bad and good. You can't get your files back, but you also weren't tempted to pay these creeps to restore your files.

How can you avoid having this happen again? The best-known ransomware program is called CryptoLocker, and it's usually spread through "phishing emails" that appear to be from legitimate companies. Phishing emails try to trick you into clicking on a link to a website that contains malicious software. Don't click on these links, no matter how authentic the email appears to be. In addition, make backups of your important data on an external hard drive, flash drive or online storage site.

The U.S. Computer Emergency Readiness Team, which is part of the Homeland Security Department, describes CryptoLocker online at <http://tinyurl.com/pno3z7w>.

Q: In the past six months I've had problems with my work computer slowing down, sometimes for as much as 20 seconds. A little box on the screen shows what's stalled, such as downloading an email attachment, and asks if I want to "Wait" or "Cancel." If I wait, the PC resumes working.

My colleagues have cleaned up the computer, but it hasn't done any good. I wonder if the slowdowns are caused by the capacity of my PC, my Internet service provider or my Google Chrome browser. Any ideas?—Tomm Johnson, Edina, Minn.

A: The consensus in online forums is that the problem is caused by an unintentional software error—what programmers call a "bug"—in the Google Chrome browser. I suggest you download a newer version of Chrome, in which the problem has likely been fixed, or switch to another browser, such as Mozilla Firefox.

AP

By RON HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATLANTA (AP)—Dads try to stay handsome, and their technology should, too.

Items that have a blend of technology and wood can look more exquisite than plastic or metal when included in the construction correctly. I found three noteworthy products sure to complete dad's stylish ensemble of personal technology:

■ GRAIN AUDIO PACKABLE WIRELESS SYSTEM ($249):

Bluetooth speakers are readily available these days in various shapes and colors. But many of them are shaped oddly and made of plastic. This speaker from Grain Audio bucks the trend and opts for a walnut wood finish on the majority of its exterior.

The grain pattern of the wood is attractive and blends nicely with the grey rubber edging that surrounds the speaker's metal grill. My tablets and phones synced easily after holding down the "G" button on the top for five seconds.

The sound is among the best you'll find in a Bluetooth speaker at this size and price. It easily handled some of my bass-heavy electronic dance playlists.

■ GROVEMADE IPHONE CASE ($39-$99):

One way to class up your dad's mobile gear is to encase it in something slim, not bulky. Dads like to ruggedize everything in huge, obtuse rubbery cases. A better-looking alternative are some iPhone cases handcrafted from Oregon black walnut.

If dad is rocking an iPhone 5 or 5s, he may like the full case for $99. The sides and the back of the two-piece slide-on case are made of hand-finished walnut.

If he wants something light for an iPhone 5c, he can opt for the less-expensive walnut bumper, at $39. It offers protection around the edges of the phone.

Both cases allow access to all the buttons, ports and camera lenses on the phones. Consider this a needed upgrade from dad's current Day-Glo "Go Niners!" cell-phone case.

Sorry, but the company doesn't make these cases for Android phones, which come in an assortment of shapes and sizes.

■ FENDER WAYNE KRAMER "ROYAL TONE" CE GUITAR ($549):

Nothing displays the beauty of wood as exquisitely as a well-built dreadnought guitar.

This Wayne Kramer "Royal Tone" Dreadnought CE from Fender offers dad everything he'll need to rock out those acoustic MC5 proto-punk covers he's been covertly working on. Kramer was the lead guitarist for the 1960s band MC5, and his stamp of approval on this guitar is a nod to discerning rocker dads. The guitar has a spruce top with a vintage sunburst tone and mahogany on the back and sides.

There's some very polished technology involved with this guitar as well. Built into the guitar is a Fishman Isys III System preamp, as well as an onboard tuner. It's really nice to be able to quickly tune all six strings with the onboard electronics, instead of having to tote along separate tuning gear in a gig bag.

The unplugged sound is bright and lively. The guitar comes off as an easy player for intermediate pickers like me. Plug it in to an amp, and it just flat out jams, blending crisp high notes and chunky power chord strums nicely. Dad will have himself a true performance-ready instrument should he choose to hit a local open-mic night.

This guitar is a good deal, at $549, given the advanced electronics, top-shelf woods and attention to design detail.

Instagram vamps up photo editing tools

NEW YORK (AP)—The photo-sharing app Instagram is adding editing tools that go beyond the vintage-looking filters that made it popular.

The Facebook-owned app said in a blog post Tuesday that users will be able to adjust the brightness, contrast, saturation and other features of photos they take with their smartphones.

The tools are available after downloading the newest version of Instagram, 6.0, on Android or Apple phones. The photo editing tools will appear under a wrench icon.

Instagram's filters can enhance photos or add a certain hue to them, to make them look like they were taken with a Polaroid camera in the 1970s. But as smartphone cameras have improved, many users have become more sophisticated about their snapshots. Some have turned to other apps with more powerful editing tools to fix photos before posting them on Instagram.

Underwood wins 3rd straight CMT video of year

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Carrie Underwood's special connection with CMT viewers helped her continue her run at the CMT Awards—and crash Luke Bryan's party.

Underwood won her third straight video of the year Wednesday night, taking the top honor for the fifth time with "See You Again." The "American Idol" champion is CMT's top overall winner with 11 belt buckles in her career.

Underwood managed to horn in on all the fun top winners Bryan and Florida Georgia Line were having. The two acts teamed up to win collaboration of the year for "This Is How We Roll"—a song they performed at the top of the show with Jason Derulo and ZZ Top and released as a remix with Derulo—and each won another belt buckle trophy.

Underwood teamed with Miranda Lambert to shut down the show with their song "Something Bad" and was clearly surprised when she took fan-voted video of the year.

"It's really hard to believe," Underwood said on stage. "I've been doing this for nine years but every single second of those nine years you guys have been amazing."

Underwood was probably surprised because it looked like it might be shaping up for a double Bryan-FGL win for "That's How We Roll." It was one of the few times Bryan didn't win. Male video of the year winner Blake Shelton bet against himself in the category, wagering that Bryan would win the category. Shelton won for "Doin' What She Likes," and now he'll be doing what Bryan likes.

"I owe Luke an expensive dinner, but that's OK," Shelton joked.

Bryan was a constant fixture early in the awards. He teamed up with his superfriends to kick it off, mashing up "This Is How We Roll," Derulo's "Talk Dirty" and ZZ Top's "La Grange." He took a shot from host Kristen Bell about falling off the stage last week—while wrapped in yellow warning tape.

And he and FGL helped Bell with her monologue, taping a segment poking fun at the Jay Z-Solange Knowles elevator dustup, complete with black-and-white security footage.

He returned to the stage later after winning CMT performance of the year with Lionel Richie for their performance of "Oh No" and "All Night Long" from "2013 CMT Artists of the Year."

"The fact that I have won an award with you is just amazing, buddy," Bryan said from the stage.

"All I can say is, if I'm having this much fun, let's do it again," Richie responded.

Bryan returned to sing his own hit "Play It Again" while he strolled through the audience.

Richie said Bryan is experiencing a run much like his own in the mid-1970s that made him an international star.

"Every once in a while—and it happened to me—there's a moment and time in your career when the forces and stars come together ... and this is Luke's time," Richie said. "I knew it the first time I met him. It really is special. You can see it in his eyes. You can see it in the way he acts. He feels empowered right now and I know that wonderful feeling. And by the way, it's going to happen for a while because he has that genuine personality."

The Bryan-FGL-Derulo-ZZ Top mega-mashup wasn't the only team up. John Legend, Jennifer Nettles and Hunter Hayes joined together on a countrified version of Legend's hit "All of Me." Eric Church and Lzzy Hale of hard rockers Halestorm turned the volume up to 11 on a version of "That's Damn Rock & Roll" that featured power vocals from Hale and a rap from Church.

Kacey Musgraves and Lee Ann Womack teamed up to salute Alan Jackson with a duet of his song "Livin' on Love" after he was awarded with the first CMT Impact Award. Jackson is celebrating the 25th year of his career.

Keith Urban performed "Cop Car" in a spot-on re-creation of Nashville's legendary The Bluebird Cafe that was surprisingly lifted into the rafters as Urban wrapped up the song. And Little Big Town put on the night's most colorful performance of the new single "Day Drinkin'," beginning on an all-white set before paint cannons turned everything into a rainbow.

The Band Perry won group of the year for "Done" and Cassadee Pope took breakthrough video for "Wasting All These Tears."

Josh Trank to direct stand-alone 'Star Wars' film

NEW YORK (AP)—Josh Trank will direct one of the planned stand-alone "Star Wars" films.

Lucasfilm announced Wednesday that the 30-year-old filmmaker will helm one of the two announced "Star Wars" spinoffs being made outside of the third trilogy. An earlier announced spinoff is to be led by "Godzilla" director Gareth Edwards.

Trank is the director of 2012's found footage-style science fiction thriller "Chronicle." He currently is working on "The Fantastic Four," the superhero team-up reboot scheduled for release next year.

Lucasfilm gave no details on the subject of the "Star Wars" movie. J.J. Abrams is in production on "Star Wars: Episode VII," which will follow

"The Return of the Jedi" in chronology.

Abrams on Tuesday tweeted a photo with a note pleading for people not to leak photos from the set of "Episode VII." In recent days, dozens of photos from the set of the film have appeared online.

But his message was also tongue-in-cheek. Though Abrams alluded to "ridiculous claims that the Millennium Falcon is in the movie," his note was wryly played on the spaceship's familiar "Holochess" board. "Star Wars" fans quickly picked up on the pun.

'Jupiter Ascending' release postponed to Feb. 6, 2015

NEW YORK (AP)—Just six weeks ahead of its planned release, the Wachowskis' space thriller "Jupiter Ascending" has been postponed to 2015.

Warner Bros. announced the date change late Tuesday. The movie, with a budget of $150 million or more and starring Channing Tatum and Mila Kunis, will now open Feb. 6 instead of July 18.

It's a stunning and unusual move for a high-profile film so close to release. "Jupiter Ascending," which Warner Bros. co-financed with Village Roadshow, will bounce out of the lucrative but high-pressure summer movie season and into early February, often a dumping ground for troubled movies.

Andy and Lana Wachowski have a checkered box-office track record. Though their "Matrix" trilogy was a huge hit, their "Cloud Atlas" and "Speed Racer" both flopped at the box office.

Blunt reveals new toughness in 'Edge of Tomorrow'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—What's more scary, fighting aliens with Tom Cruise or singing in front of Meryl Streep and Johnny Depp?

Both brought butterflies to Emily Blunt's stomach, which is how the 31-year-old actress knows when to take a role.

"I like asking myself, 'How on Earth am I going to do this?'" Blunt said as she sipped an iced latte at a coffee shop in the artsy L.A. neighborhood of Los Feliz.

In her latest film, "Edge of Tomorrow," the lithe British beauty wields big guns—of the biceps and military-style variety—as Rita Vrataski, tasked with turning Cruise's character from a scared pencil pusher to a skilled warrior.

"In these male-fueled genres, it's usually the woman who's holding the hand of the guy and he's running through explosions leading her, and I wanted to be doing the leading," Blunt said. "This was the extreme idea of what I ever thought I'd want to do."

Her background is in theater—she made her professional debut on a London stage in 2002 opposite Judi Dench. Blunt's big-screen breakthrough came four years later in "The Devil Wears Prada" as the chilly magazine assistant who was "just one stomach flu away" from her goal weight. She has since appeared in more than 20 movies.

But none prepared her to be an action star. What did was three months of rigorous training in martial arts, weapons and wire work; and working with Cruise, who famously does his own stunts. ("I didn't want him to be the only one showing off," she laughs.) Blunt wore a weighted vest to prepare for the 85-pound armored "Exo-Suit" she wears in the film. She nearly broke her nose—demonstrating for a reporter how the on-set physician straightened it with a finger in each nostril and a quick, painful shift—and may have permanently damaged her thumb.

The training helped her become Rita, and taught Blunt about herself.

The training helped her become Rita, and taught Blunt about herself.

"I think it did toughen me up in a big way," she said, "because now I know what I'm capable of."

Director Doug Liman said Blunt's character is "the hero of the movie."

"Emily's performance is even more impressive when you step back and see that she dominates the screen against the biggest movie star in the world whose character also happens to have a superpower," he said.

Blunt's next role demanded a different sort of bravery: singing on screen. Blunt, Streep and Depp star in Rob Marshall's dark musical fairy tale, "Into the Woods," due in theaters on Christmas Day. She worked with a singing coach to prepare for her role in the Stephen Sondheim adaptation.

Besides training, Blunt draws on her deep love of people to inform the characters she plays. An avid reader, she finds that discovering characters on the page inspires her when she creates them on the screen.

"When I choose to play a character, it's because I love that human heartbeat that they have and I've found an 'in' with them," she said.

Disconnecting from Hollywood is part of the process. Blunt recharges at home with her husband, actor John Krasinski, and their 3 1/2-month-old daughter, Hazel. The couple likes to entertain, and Blunt cooks Italian dishes, and a few from her homeland ("English food is underrated," she said).

That source of off-camera love and stability allows Blunt to weather Hollywood's whims and follow the butterflies when a challenging role beckons.

A few 'inmates' from 'Orange' discuss prison life

By FRAZIER MOORE
AP TELEVISION WRITER

NEW YORK (AP)—An upper-middle class blonde from Brooklyn goes to jail for a drug-related screw-up years before.

The women's federal prison of "Orange Is the New Black" is a different world than Piper Chapman had known, populated with a wildly varied group of characters played (alongside series star Taylor Schilling) by TV's most diverse cast of actors.

As this Netflix series shot its second season last fall on its Queens, New York, soundstage, a visit to the all-too-gritty-looking prison set found several of these actresses delighted to be serving time on this groundbreaking drama (whose 13 new episodes are available for streaming Friday on the Netflix website):

PBS: Ivory tusks are off 'Antiques Roadshow'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—PBS says "Antiques Roadshow" is dropping appraisals of ivory tusks.

The tusks won't be shown in new episodes or in segments drawn from previously aired shows, PBS said Wednesday.

The popular public TV series features a wide variety of items brought in for professional assessment, including of their market value.

The Wildlife Conservation Society lauded the decision as an important step in ensuring elephant ivory tusks and their "assumed monetary value" are not glorified on TV.

Ivory poaching is decimating the ranks of Africa's endangered elephants, the group said.

PBS said antique items that include ivory elements, such as musical instruments, will continue to be appraised to inform "Antiques Roadshow" viewers about such objects and what PBS called "the larger issues at hand."

■ TV veteran Kate Mulgrew ("Star Trek: Voyager," "Warehouse 13") plays "Red" Reznikov, a tough-as-nails inmate who was once part of New York's Russian mob and now runs the prison kitchen.

"The hardest part of the show was finding my character before they said 'Action!' the first day," she says. "You have to be able to show her toughness and, through her toughness, her heart—and you had to show it from the first shot."

She did. Ever since, it's been a blast for Mulgrew.

"This is not a vanity role," she acknowledges. "But I'm of an age now (59) where none of that is as important as it once was. To find a role this rich, nuanced and specific is absolutely joyful for me. It's liberating."

■ "Taystee" Jefferson is Danielle Brooks' first big role after graduating from the Juilliard School. Hers is not a vanity role, either.

"There are times when I'm like, 'Can we please do my eyebrows? Can I get a little more foundation?'" says Brooks with a laugh. "But I truly enjoy the freedom of coming to work, not having to wear Spanx or extensions, to just be me. You can't hide behind anything here. It's really freeing."

She wants her audience to identify with Taystee, no matter how unrelatable her character might seem at first.

"We all cry, we all bleed, we all hurt," Brooks declares. "I want everyone to see Taystee, who they feel so far away from, and realize: 'I've felt like her before.'"

■ Growing up in Washington, D.C., Samira Wiley, who plays Taystee's friend, the joker Poussey Washington, knew from childhood she wanted to be an actress.

"But I couldn't necessarily see where I might fit in," she says. It was clear there weren't a lot of black women snagging great roles on TV. "But there's

JK Rowling tweet tweaks Amazon in contract dispute

NEW YORK (AP)—J.K. Rowling added a subtle comment under her pen name Robert Galbraith on Wednesday about the standoff between her publisher and Amazon.com.

The "Harry Potter" author noted in a tweet from @rgalbraith that there are "lots of ways to order" her novel "The Silkworm" in the U.S., as "Amazon kindly suggest(s)." Row-ling spokeswoman Rebecca Salt confirmed that the twitter account was authentic.

Amazon is in a contract dispute with Rowling's U.S. publisher, Hachette Book Group, and isn't accepting pre-orders for "The Silkworm" and other Hachette releases. "The Silkworm," Rowling's second Galbraith detective novel, is out June 19.

part of that surprise."

■ Uzo Aduba didn't get the "Orange" role she auditioned for. Then she learned she had been cast as the unstable, sometimes feral "Crazy Eyes" Warren.

"That was exciting. But at the same time I'm wondering: What was it about my audition that made them think, 'She'd make a great Crazy Eyes'?"

After all, this is a character, says Aduba, "who has an innocence about her like a child—except children aren't SCARY! But when I tried her on, it felt like the right part for me. I felt right at home."

■ Lorraine Toussaint, whose credits include "Saving Grace" and "Friday Night Lights," claims to have "fallen in love" with the character she plays, "Vee" Parker, a charismatic former drug dealer who used kids as her mules.

"It's an interesting love affair," she allows. "I get to dance with my shadow self. I get to sit in the backseat watching Vee drive the car, and she drives fast and dangerously. I get to be surprised by who she is and what she does, because I'm seeing her from the inside out."

He also joked about having to go to the bathroom during the many long tributes, but he turned serious when he spoke of Katz's legacy. He told mourners to keep up the schools and other projects his friend funded.

Cosby said: "You don't have to have big money. All you have to have is yourself."

terson and Sherman Alexie and non-Hachette author John Green are among those who have strongly criticized the Seattle-based online retailer. Amazon has suggested negotiations will be prolonged and customers in the meantime can buy Hachette books from its competitors. As of late Monday afternoon, "The Silkworm" was No. 10 on Barnes & Noble.com.

D-Day ship's flag among WWII artifacts up for sale

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—A U.S. flag from one of the thousands of Allied ships that delivered troops to the Normandy beaches is among the hundreds of D-Day and other World War II artifacts being auctioned in New York City a day before the 70th anniversary of the history-changing invasion.

The sale at Bonhams in Manhattan also features rare print-outs of the original series of hourly Dow Jones news bulletins reporting the fighting on France's north coast on June 6, 1944. The American flag that flew aboard the U.S.-built LST 493 and the Dow Jones documents, both owned by World War II collector Rodney Hilton Brown, have pre-sale estimates of $12,000 to $18,000.

The auction also includes battlefield souvenirs, innovative wartime technology, rare documents and photographs from the war's European and Pacific theaters.

Sister's erratic behavior can't be blamed on deceased dad

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

DEAR ABBY: I'm the middle child. Our father died in the Gulf War. None of us really knew him, but my younger sister, "Delia," has no memory of him at all.

She has been acting out for years now, and has broken our mother's heart more times than I can count. Whenever she messes up, she blames it on not knowing our father and the life she "could" have led.

It has been 20 years, Abby! The past is the past. Delia continues to ruin her future and blame our mom. It has Mom wondering why she was able to survive this crisis 20 years ago but can't manage to deal with my sister.

I think Delia may have a chemical imbalance, or just never dealt with our father's death. How do you convince someone to get help? How do you make her see that Dad died so she could enjoy the many freedoms of America?

DRAINED IN DELAWARE

DEAR DRAINED: I'm sorry for your family's loss, but we are all responsible for our own behavior and our own emotions. You can't force "help" on your dysfunctional sister. Before she'll be willing to accept that she needs it, she will have to accept that SHE has been responsible for her own mistakes and behavior. If your father had lived, her life might not have been any different than it is.

The person who COULD use some professional help might be your mother. Counseling might help her to quit trying to rescue her adult daughter, or blaming herself for the problems Delia has created for herself. I'm not saying it will be easy—letting go rarely is. But it might improve her emotional and physical health.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive, physically fit, well-educated, 41-year-old divorced woman with two young children. Recently a co-worker I have known for several months asked me to accompany him on a weekend hiking trip. (He's 23.) After a few conversations, he confessed that he was "deeply in love" with me and hoped we could begin a "serious relationship."

Abby, he's mature, good-looking, financially independent and has a great sense of humor. I'm attracted to him. Should I pursue this relationship, or wait until I'm attracted to someone closer to my own age? Help!

A.S. IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR A.S.: Whoa! Slow down. Regardless of the age difference, an overnight first date (with a co-worker, yet) seems like an awfully speedy beginning to me. If you're smart, start with a coffee date, graduate to a dinner date, and pursue the relationship from there. Only time will tell if this is the real thing.

Slumping Tigers lose again, 8-2 to Blue Jays

DETROIT
(AP)—Adam Lind doubled twice to drive in three runs and Melky Cabrera added a homer and three hits, lifting the Toronto Blue Jays to an 8-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers on Wednesday night.

Lind's two-run double off Rick Porcello (8-3) in the sixth put Toronto ahead 3-2, and Aaron Loup got out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the bottom of the inning in relief of R.A. Dickey (6-4).

The AL East-leading Blue Jays added three runs in the eighth and two in the ninth in winning for the 18th time in 22 games.

Miguel Cabrera and Ian Kinsler homered for Detroit, but Kinsler also left the bases loaded twice. The AL Central-leading Tigers left 11 runners on base in their fourth straight loss. Detroit has dropped 12 of 16.

Jose Bautista also had three hits for Toronto, including a two-run double in the ninth.

Detroit Tigers' Ian Kinsler connects for a solo home run during the third inning of a baseball game against the Toronto Blue Jays in Detroit, Wednesday, June 4, 2014.

Indians 7, Red Sox 4, 12 innings

In Cleveland, Asdrubal Cabrera hit a three-run homer with one out in the 12th inning to give Cleveland a three-game sweep of the defending World Series champions.

With two runners on and Boston playing five infielders, Cabrera drove an 0-1 pitch from Edward Mujica (2-2) into Boston's bullpen as the Indians won their sixth straight overall and ninth in a row at home. Cleveland is an AL-best 21-11 at Progressive Field.

The start of the game was delayed by rain until 9:33 p.m., canceling a scheduled ceremonial first pitch by Browns rookie quarterback Johnny Manziel.

Carlos Carrasco (1-3), the Indians' seventh pitcher, worked two innings.

The surging Indians have trimmed seven games off first-place Detroit's lead in the AL Central in 17 days. Cleveland is within 3½ games and back to .500 for the first time since April 24.

David Ortiz homered for the Red Sox, who came in riding a seven-game winning streak.

Diamondbacks 16, Rockies 8

In Denver, Miguel Montero drove in a career-high six runs, Paul Goldschmidt hit a go-ahead, three-run double in the eighth inning and Arizona sent Colorado to its sixth straight loss.

The Rockies led 8-5 before the Diamondbacks scored six times in the eighth to reclaim the lead. They were hardly done, adding five more in the ninth to turn a close game into a run-away win. The Diamondbacks tied a season high with 21 hits.

The top five hitters in the lineup each had three hits and combined for 14 RBIs. Montero drove in two runs on sacrifice flies, had a run-scoring single and hit a three-run homer in the ninth.

Brad Ziegler (2-1) got two outs in the seventh to earn the win. Rex Brothers (2-4) took the loss after the big eighth.

White Sox 2, Dodgers 1

In Los Angeles, John Danks and three relievers combined on a two-hitter and Leury Garcia hit his first major league home run for Chicago.

Danks (4-5) allowed only two hits and one run and struck out five in 7 1-3 innings for his first road win in more than six weeks. He entered the game 1-3 with a 6.83 ERA in five road starts. He also had an infield single in the sixth inning, his second hit in 28 career plate appearances.

Garcia led off the third with a homer and Adam Dunn homered to lead off the fourth.

Josh Beckett (3-3) went six innings and allowed two runs and nine hits for the Dodgers, who have lost six of their last eight.

Nationals 8, Phillies 4

In Washington, Stephen Strasburg struck out 11 in seven innings and Washington kept Philadelphia's bats quiet yet again in the rain-interrupted game.

Strasburg (5-4) had the Phillies flailing as he hit double digits in Ks for the 15th time in his career — and for the fourth time without issuing a walk. All but one of the strikeouts were swinging, including Marlon Byrd (95 mph fastball), Ryan Howard (95 mph fastball) and Domonic Brown (88 mph changeup) when the rain started to fall in the sixth inning.

The only consolation for the Phillies is that they scored an earned run for the first time in four games when facing the Nationals' ace. The streak reached 25 innings.

Cardinals 5, Royals 2, 11 innings

In Kansas City, Mo., Matt Carpenter had a career-high five hits, including the go-ahead double in the 11th inning, and St. Louis snapped a three-game losing streak.

After the Royals rallied with two runs in the ninth, Peter Bourjos worked a one-out walk off Royals reliever Kelvin Herrera (1-2) in the 11th. Carpenter then rapped his double to center field.

Allen Craig added a two-run single off Tim Collins later in the inning, and Pat Neshek breezed through the bottom half to end the Royals' six-game winning streak against National League clubs.

Sam Freeman (1-0) earned the win with a perfect 10th inning.

Athletics 7, Yankees 4

In New York, Yoenis Cespedes homered twice, Josh Donaldson hit a tie-breaking shot in the seventh inning and Oakland overcame a four-run deficit to beat skidding New York for its fifth straight victory.

Donaldson connected off Jose Ramirez, who was making his major league debut, and added a pair of infield singles. Cespedes also had three hits to help the A's move a season-best 15 games over .500 at 37-22, the best mark in the American League.

Jacoby Ellsbury had three hits, including a three-run homer, but the Yankees matched a season worst with their fourth consecutive defeat. They've been outscored 21-0 from the seventh inning on during the slide.

An error by Derek Jeter hurt New York, which dropped to 1-5 on a seven-game homestand.

Padres 3, Pirates 2

In San Diego, the Padres had only one hit—Everth Cabrera's bunt single in the first inning—and still beat Pittsburgh thanks to Francisco Liriano's wildness.

The Padres played ultimate small-ball, scoring on a sacrifice fly, an error and a bases-loaded walk to avoid a three-game sweep. Rene Rivera's fly to Andrew McCutcheon to end the eighth was the only ball fielded by a Pirates outfielder. Carlos Quentin's hit a sacrifice fly in the first, but it was caught in short right by second baseman Josh Harrison.

Ian Kennedy (5-6) won his third straight start, striking out seven and allowing two runs on five hits in six innings. He walked one. Huston Street pitched the ninth for his 18th save in as many chances.

Liriano (1-6) walked six and struck out seven in five innings.

Orioles 6, Rangers 5

In Arlington, Texas, Nick Markakis hit a home run and a go-ahead single, and Chris Davis homered for Baltimore against his former team just as Nelson Cruz did a day earlier.

Markakis' single in the sixth inning came after Adrian Beltre's second home run of the game—a three-run shot—pulled Texas even at 5-all in the fifth.

Cruz had three singles and reached twice on errors by Luis Sardinas, a surprise fill-in at shortstop for Elvis Andrus. It was the second time in less than a week Andrus wasn't in the starting lineup.

Bud Norris (4-5) allowing six hits and five runs in five innings for the Orioles, and the bullpen pitched four scoreless innings. Zach Britton earned his fifth save.

Marlins 5, Rays 4

In St. Petersburg, Fla., Donovan Solano hit a three-run homer off David Price to help Miami extend Tampa Bay's longest losing streak in nearly five years to nine games. It is the second-longest losing streak in the major leagues this season.

Casey McGehee had an RBI single for the Marlins, who won the first two games of a four-game home-and-home series in Miami, including Tuesday's 1-0 win on a bases-loaded walk.

The sputtering Rays, coming off an 0-8 trip that was the worst in team history, tumbled 14 games under .500 at 23-37—the second-worst record in baseball. The last time they were this far below the break-even point was the end of 2007, the final season they were called the Devil Rays.

Giants 3, Reds 2

In Cincinnati, Michael Morse and Juan Perez homered with two outs in the sixth inning and San Francisco ended Cincinnati's season-high four-game winning streak.

San Francisco won for the 10th time in 13 games, improving the best record in the majors to 38-21.

Morse hit a solo shot and Perez had a two-run homer off left-hander Tony Cingrani (2-6), who has lost all of his four starts since returning from shoulder tendinitis.

Ryan Vogelsong (4-2) extended his recent streak of solid pitching by giving up two runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings while fanning a career-high nine. The right-hander is 3-0 with a 2.05 ERA in last four starts.

Twins 6, Brewers 4

In Minneapolis, Oswaldo Arcia drove in four runs, including the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to lead Minnesota to its seventh win in its last eight games against Milwaukee.

Arcia hit a three-run home run in the fourth inning, going deep for the third time in 10 games since his recall from Triple-A, and Josh Willingham forced in a run with a bases-loaded walk in the fifth inning before setting up Arcia's go-ahead single with a two-out double.

Aramis Ramirez returned from the disabled list after missing 21 games with a strained left hamstring to wallop a three-run homer that tied the game at 4 in the seventh, following leadoff singles by Jonathan Lucroy and Carlos Gomez.

Ricky Nolasco (4-5), who retired 13 straight batters until that point, recovered to finish the inning and pick up the victory when the Twins rallied again in the bottom of the frame.

Angels 4, Astros 0

In Houston, Garrett Richards stuck out nine to match his career best over eight excellent innings and Los Angeles snapped a season-worst four-game skid.

Richards (5-2) bounced back from a terrible outing in his last start when he allowed five runs while getting only two outs. It was the shortest non-injury-related start of his career.

Joe Smith struck out one in a hitless ninth to complete the four-hitter for the Angels.

Erick Aybar had two doubles and an RBI, and David Freese doubled and drove in a run for the Angels.

Houston starter Jarrod Cosart (4-5) allowed eight hits and three runs and tied a career-high with eight strikeouts in 6 2-3 innings.

Mariners 2, Braves 0

In Atlanta, Hisashi Iwakuma combined with two relievers on a six-hit shutout and streaking Seattle completed a two-game sweep.

Cole Gillespie and Kyle Seager hit run-scoring singles. Seattle has won five straight, matching its longest winning streak of the season.

Iwakuma (4-2) gave up only six hits with seven strikeouts and no walks in seven innings. The right-hander was sharp, throwing 71 of his 96 pitches for strikes.

Mike Minor (2-4) allowed only one run in seven innings, but the Braves fell to 0-6 in interleague games.

Yoervis Medina pitched a perfect eighth before Fernando Rodney earned his 16th save with three straight outs in the ninth.

Cubs 5, Mets 4

In Chicago, Starlin Castro went 3 for 4 with three RBIs and Chicago outlasted New York in a mistake-filled game that featured a combined 13 pitchers.

Lucas Duda had a two-run double for a Mets offense that left the bases loaded in the fifth and sixth innings.

The Mets have dropped two straight after winning three in a row and are 8-18 in one-run games.

Cubs starter Edwin Jackson (4-5) lasted five innings, giving up five hits and five walks. Just one of the four runs he surrendered was earned.

Hector Rondon pitched the ninth for his seventh save in eight chances.

Reliever Dana Eveland (0-1) gave up a run in 2-3 of an inning to take the loss.

Nadal, Murray set up French Open semifinal matchup

PARIS (AP)—Briefly, and only briefly, Rafael Nadal was in a difficult spot in the French Open quarterfinals.

For the first time in this year's tournament, the eight-time champion dropped a set.

And this had to be on Nadal's mind: His opponent, David Ferrer, could present real problems. Not only is Ferrer ranked No. 5, and not only was he the runner-up at Roland Garros a year ago—to Nadal, of course—but he also beat Nadal on red clay the last time they played each other.

So how did Nadal handle this test? Perfectly. From late in the second set, he won 10 games in a row, and 13 of 14 the rest of the way, to come back and beat Ferrer 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, 6-1, setting up a semifinal Friday against Wimbledon champion Andy Murray.

"At the beginning," Nadal acknowledged, "David was playing with a higher intensity than me."

But once Nadal made a key adjustment—deciding to dispense with his surprisingly off-target backhand as much as possible and instead do whatever he could to use his topspin-heavy forehand—he took over.

After committing 28 unforced errors across the windy first two sets, Nadal had zero in the third, and only three in the last.

"When I was able to hit with my forehand," Nadal said, "I felt that I was in control."

Ferrer, for his part, said that in the latter stages, "I lost my concentration, my focus."

It was Nadal's 33rd consecutive win at the French Open and improved his record in the event to 64-1. His only loss at the tournament came to Robin Soderling in the fourth round in 2009.

Britain's Andy Murray celebrates scoring a point during the quarterfinal match of the French Open tennis tournament against France's Gael Monfils at the Roland Garros stadium, in Paris, France, Wednesday, June 4, 2014. AP

The Spaniard, who turned 28 on Tuesday, is not used to facing much in the way of hardship at Roland Garros. So Nadal took what he was able to do against Ferrer as a good sign.

"At the end of the day, I am rather happy to have been able to turn the situation around," said Nadal, who wasn't thrilled to be put on Court Suzanne Lenglen, the second-largest arena, for the second time this year. "I managed to pull through, even though it was complicated."

The route Murray took during his 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 1-6, 6-0 victory over No. 23 Gael Monfils of France was far more circu-itous, finishing right on the cusp of dusk after 9:30 p.m. In front of a crowd loudly pulling for Monfils at Court Philippe Chatrier, Murray was terrific at the outset, mediocre in the middle, then closed on a high.

After a brief discussion with a tournament official over whether there was enough sun to play the fifth set—the Roland Garros courts have no artificial lights—Murray made the whole thing moot. He raced through that set in 21 minutes, winning 24 of 31 points, as Monfils appeared to stop trying.

"Everything happened very fast," Monfils said.

Said Murray: "It was so dark at the end. Thankfully for me, he played a poor fifth set once I got ahead."

Murray will be playing in the French Open semifinals for the second time; he lost to Nadal in 2011. In all, Nadal owns a 14-5 edge in their head-to-head matches.

"I need to recover very well," Murray said, "and try to be especially calm for that one."

The other men's semifinal will be No. 2 Novak Djokovic against No. 18 Ernests Gulbis.

Earlier, No. 4 Simona Halep of Romania and No. 28 Andrea Petkovic of Germany both moved into the semifinals of a Grand Slam tournament for the first time. Thursday's other women's semifinal will be 2012 champion Maria Sharapova against 18th-seeded Eugenie Bouchard of Canada.

Halep beat 2009 champion Svetlana Kuznetsova 6-2, 6-2, and Petkovic defeated 2012 runner-up Sara Errani by that very same score.

A year ago, Halep arrived at Roland Garros ranked 57th. But over the past 13 months, she's won seven titles. Petkovic, meanwhile, is enjoying a resurgence.

She made it to the top 10 in 2011, when she was the only woman to reach three major quarterfinals (although she went 0-3). In late 2012, she hurt her right knee, and her ranking plummeted to 177th last year. But she's worked her way back, and after eliminating Errani, the gregarious Petkovic kissed her racket - something she said she'd never done before.

"I don't know what happened to me. I was just overwhelmed by emotion," Petkovic said. "I had no boy to kiss, so I kissed my racket, right?"

James feels 'blessed' by shot at another NBA title

SAN ANTONIO (AP)—LeBron James should be used to the NBA Finals by now.

After five trips to the championship series in eight years, it would make sense if he had a been-there, done-that attitude when stepping onto the sport's biggest stage.

He doesn't.

On Wednesday James took a seat inside a makeshift interview area, sneaked a quick glance at the NBA Finals signage that was off to his left side, and beamed like a kid in a candy store. Just a couple years removed from being ripped for not delivering in the moments that decide championships, James seems more comfortable in these surroundings than ever.

"I'm blessed, man," James said. "That's all I can say."

And then, without stopping, the four-time MVP said much more.

"This is my fifth appearance in a finals," he continued. "I'm blessed. I was a kid who watched so many finals appearances and, you know, watched Michael Jordan and watched Shaq and Kobe ... we watched throwback finals games. ... I just wished maybe I could see the finals verbiage behind me and be a part of this."

His wishes come true again Thursday night, when James and the Miami Heat open these finals against the San Antonio Spurs, the NBA's first championship-series rematch since 1998. The Heat are going for a third straight title, the Spurs are trying for their fifth crown since 1999.

If Miami wins, the perception will be James came through.

If Miami loses, the perception will be he didn't do enough.

James knows that's the reality. He doesn't mind.

"I play for my teammates, our team, the city of Miami, my friends and family, and I gave it all for that," James said. "And at the end of the day, win, lose or draw, I'm satisfied with that. I don't get involved in what people say about me and my legacy. I think it's actually kind of stupid."

By now, the story behind James' rise to a champion is no secret. He left Cleveland in 2010 because he felt Miami gave him a better opportunity to win titles. In 2011, when Miami lost to Dallas in the final round, James said he was relying too much upon proving his doubters and naysayers wrong.

So the next season, he vowed to play the game the way he had in the past. Championship No. 1 came in 2012, championship No. 2 came last season in an epic seven-game series against the Spurs, and now the shot at No. 3 is here.

"He's really taken his game to a whole other level," Heat guard Dwyane Wade said. "Obviously as an individual he's grown, as a man, both on and off the court from his own experiences. So I think he's done a phenomenal job. ... If I sit back and look from afar, he's done an unbelievable job under the microscope that he's been under since he was 16 years old of doing things his way and been very successful at doing them."

If James is feeling pressure right now, it doesn't show publicly.

Away from the public eye, though, teammates have marveled all season about how someone who makes more than $50 million a year in salary and endorsements is working perhaps harder than ever.

"Nothing he does is normal," Heat forward Michael Beasley said. "He practices wearing a weight vest. Does that sound normal?"

James spent the majority of his question-answering time Wednesday laughing or smiling. Off-stage, he joked with a few other people, chatting and seeming as relaxed as he would if this was the eve of a Heat-Spurs game in January, not one in June.

The Spurs are worried about stopping James, they know that won't happen.

"We understand LeBron is the best player in the league and just physically he's just a monster," San Antonio forward Tim Duncan said.

In 2007, when the Spurs swept Cleveland, James was still learning.

In 2011, he felt like he absolutely had to win, and failed to get it done.

In 2012 and 2013, he just played the game the way he felt it needs to be played. And it's

Attorney: Donald Sterling agrees to sell Clippers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Los Angeles Clippers owner Donald Sterling agreed Wednesday to sign off on selling the team he has owned for 33 years to former Microsoft CEO Steve Ballmer for $2 billion, bringing the possibility of a resolution to weeks of rumors, uncertainty and looming possibilities for legal action. The agreement hadn't been officially signed Wednesday afternoon, according to an individual with knowledge of the negotiations who wasn't authorized to discuss them publicly. But Donald Sterling's attorney, Maxwell Blecher, said he "has made an agreement with the NBA to resolve all their differences." Sterling gave his consent to a deal that was negotiated by his wife, Shelly Sterling, to sell the team, Blecher said.

Representatives for Shelly Sterling and the NBA declined to comment.

The agreement was an about face for Donald Sterling, who just last week filed a $1 billion suit against the NBA in federal court alleging the league violated his constitutional rights by relying on information from an "illegal" recording that publicized racist remarks he made to a girlfriend. It also said the league committed a breach of contract by fining Sterling $2.5 million and that it violated antitrust laws by trying to force a sale. Blecher said that as a result of the agreement, the federal suit will now be dismissed.

no coincidence that it's all fallen into place since.

"Every time I come up here and talk to you guys or I do something, you know, very well on the basketball floor or off the floor, my city is rewarded by that," James said. "My family is rewarded by that, my friends are rewarded by that, the kids and all the kids in the world that look up to me are rewarded by that. That's enough to get me by. Everything else is extra credit."

Shocker Nation back on track, tops Pelicans

By ROSELYN B. MONROYO

REPORTER

Shocker Nation recovered from its previous loss with an 86-79 triumph over the Pelicans in the second game in the 2014 DL Corp. Invitational Basketball League last Tuesday at the Gillette Multipurpose Gymnasium.

The win was Shocker Nation's fourth in five games, putting the team in solo second place behind the unbeaten San Antonio (5-0) and Island Manpower (5-0). Shocker Nation absorbed its lone loss in the tournament so far at the hands of the defending champion Do-como (2-3).

The victory over the slumping Pelicans (1-4) was a come-from-behind one, as Shocker Nation was behind by 9 at the break, 34-43. A 31-11 scoring run in the third put Shock Nation back on top and it kept the upper hand and the victory after playing steady in the last three minutes of the fourth canto.

Shocker Nation showed poise in the closing minutes after the Pelicans sliced the once double-digit deficit, 54-65, to a deuce, 71-73, with Leo Galarse anchoring the team's fight back in the final period and drawing some help from Luiz Reyes.

Reyes could have cut the lead to 1 if not for his split charity and after he made his second free throw, Shocker Nation went to attack the Pelicans defense on the other end. A drive-and-draw play at the right baseline started by Shane Deleon Guerrero and finished by Adrian Palacios fooled the Pelicans' defense and gave Shocker Nation more cushion, 75-71, 3:01 left on the clock.

Lester Vertudez then made it a 76-71 advantage when he intercepted the Pelicans' inbound pass and converted a point-blank shot. Shocker Nation was never threatened after that as it matched every basket the Pelicans drilled in the last two minutes of the match.

Meanwhile, Island Manpower also fought back against TBK Mechanics so stretch its winning run to five and grab a share of the lead with San Antonio.

Down at 64-76 after the third period, Island Manpower unloaded 33 big points in the payoff canto to steal the victory from TBK (3-2).

Jerome Norita towed Island Manpower back into the game after drilling 13 of his 23 markers in the fourth period. He, Cecilio Bisana, and Syl Teregeyo scored clutch baskets for Island Manpower in the closing minutes of the match. Pete Lizama and Ed Pangelinan also helped in the fourth, combining for 11 points.

TBK lost the lead and the game when its main gunners Ivan Devero and Jack Quitugua were held to 5 points in the fourth frame. Devero had only two field goals, while Quitugua was limited to one free throw, leaving Nate Mateo the tough job to keep TBK afloat.

(U15), Thea Minor (U18), and Carol Lee (U12) completed the CNMI sweep after topping their respective divisions. Race's players also took five of the six doubles crown to smoke their competition.

In this year's regional championships, only the U18 and U12 age group competitions will remain, while the tournament will revert to the U14 and U16 events. The Top 4 players in each age group will earn slots on the North Pacific Team that will compete against the East and West in the 2014 Pacific Oceania Junior Championships in Fiji this August.

In the POJC, the CNMI had the best showing (in terms of Top 4 finishes) for the last three years. Last year, the Commonwealth bet grabbed eight semis seats—the most by any nation. In 2012 and 2011, the CNMI also secured the most Final Four slots with six and five, respectively.

In the singles division, there was also a close battle with the winner decided by only five pinfalls. Raul Dumapit earned 612 pinfalls to prevail against Raphael Zapanta, Ronald Batac, and Ramir Deleon, who logged identical 607 pinfalls for the three-way tie for runner-up honors. Dumapit nearly posted 200 pinfalls in each of the three games with his 199 in Games 1 and 3 and 214 in Game 3. Batac had two 200-plus pinfall game (207 and 236), but his 164 in Game 2 cost him the singles crown. Zapanta also earned 200-plus pinfalls in two games (202 and 236), but had a meltdown in the last game with his 169 pinfalls. Ramir De Leon fell short too, because after registering 219 and 204 in the first two games, he marked only 193 in Game 3.

In the women's division, Gloria Omechelang recorded 1,575 to down Diana Camacho

(1,511) and Yho Villavicencio (1,496). She then teamed up with Tess Fabie in the doubles to hand Diana Camacho another bridesmaid finish. The Omechelang-Fabie tandem collected 1,085 pinfalls to defeat Diana Camacho and Emi William's 1,011. Carrie and Janice Camacho rounded out the Top 3 with their 970 pinfalls.

In the singles event, Diana Camacho this time finished on top. She gathered 583 pinfalls to win over Omechelang (561) and Vilavicencio (536).

Carlos Queiroz now calling the shots for the squad, the Iranians will past the group stage.

France is favored

After faltering in the group stage in 2010, France is expected to make it to the next round and top Group E, too.

The throng of Euro leagues players on France's roster and arrival of Didier Claude Deschamps in 2012 make the Les Bleus the team likely to place first in its bracket despite the higher ranking of Switzerland. The Swiss is the top-ranked team in Group E at No. 8, but the squad has yet to win the Cup, while the No. 16-ranked France did it in 1998. Joining the two Euro zone teams are Central America's Honduras and South America's Ecuador. Switzerland topped the Group E of the Euro zone qualifying with its unbeaten record (7-3-0) and is best remembered for beating eventual champion Spain, 1-0, during the group stage in 2010.

Honduras was also in South Africa, was bracketed with Switzerland, Spain, and Chile, and bowed out of the group stage. Back then, Honduras had an ageing lineup, but this year, fresher legs are suiting up for the Los Catrachos.

Ecuador finished a strong fourth in the South American qualifying with its 7-4-5 slate, beating Uruguay in the goal difference point and the La Tricolor will bank on that strong showing to make it past the Round of 16, their best finish so far in three World Cup appearances. Ecuador has a nice mix of experienced and youth players.

Wild Bill's still leads M-League

Wild Bill's forced a draw against Korean Football Association to Saipan to remain on top of the leaderboard in the M-League.

Jack Thoensaket drilled a game-tying goal in the 48th minute to help Wild Bill's improve to a 14-4-0 win-draw-loss record and 46 points in Division 1. Wild Bill's is ahead by one win against Tan Holdings FC (13-2-4) and two over Inter Godfather's (12-2-5).

KFAS remained at fourth place with its 11-5-4 slate. It threatened to hand Wild Bill's its first loss in the league when Byung Kwan Ohng found the back of the net in the 28th minute of their match last Sunday at the Oleai Sports Complex Field.

However, Wild Bill's battled back in the second half with an early goal from Thoensaket.

Two more games were played last Sunday with Tan Holdings capitalizing on the depleted MP United crew en route to an 8-0 win and Sun Palace and the Thundercats settling for a draw in their Division 2 match.

Sean Perez had a hat-trick for Tan Holdings, while Ruselle Zapanta chipped in two goals. J.J. Takano, Bradley Brostrom, and Jershwin Angeles added one goal apiece.

In the Division 2 match, the Thundercats scored first off Timothy Tawanpiy's goal in the 41st minute, but Sun Palace equalized in the second half, thanks to Jin Jihu's goal in the 60th minute.

Women's league

Meanwhile, only two matches in the 2014 NMIFA Women's Spring League were played last Saturday at the Oleai Sports Complex Field.

The first game between Paire and Shirley's FC resulted in a forfeit for the latter, as the former did not have enough players for the match. The opposing teams, however, still play a friendly game.

In the second match, Matansa won over Tan Holdings FC, 1-0. Pratoom Stoffer scored the lone goal in the Matansa victory, as she hit her target in the 32nd minute.

In the third tiff, Kanoa had a similar 1-0 triumph over MP United. Marielle Gariguez scored for Kanoa FC three minutes before the first half ended.

The CNMI Junior Tennis Team is sending 17 players to Guam for the 2014 North Pacific Championships.

The list includes U18's Colin Ramsey, U16's Negahr Rastgui, U14's Luther Lizama, Vincent Tudela, Haruya Eda, Steven Goodwin, Tania Tan, Julia Ishikawa, Mimi Sakano, and Ami Tsukagoshi, and U12's Robbie Schorr, Ken Song, Aditya Rai, Malika Miyawaki, Conatsu Kaga, Jireh Warren, and Asia Raulerson.

The Commonwealth's youth players will see action in the regional tournament, beginning on Monday until next Saturday at the Rick Ninete Tennis Court, and will challenge the representatives of the host, the Federates States of Micronesia, and Palau.

"Obviously the names of several of the NMI's best junior players are not on the entry form this year. This is largely due to school going very late this year. Several kids would miss finals or graduation if they went to Guam," CNMI coach Jeff Race said in an email to Saipan Tribune yesterday. "Others are starting high school in August and don't want to miss the first couple of weeks in their new school by going to Fiji.

Despite the absence of some key players, Race is still confident with the Commonwealth players' chances against representatives of the three other nations.

"We still have many strong players though. I believe we will still be the strongest team there, but I am quite sure that I'll be able to keep my hair this year. There's a silver lining to every cloud," the CNMI mentor added.

Last year, Race had his head shaved when his wards swept the singles crown and took all 12 slots on the North Team during the regional championships held on Saipan. In the boys division singles last year, Jake Lee ruled the U18 age group, while Michael Ren and Chris Cajigan prevailed in the U12 and U15 divisions, respectively.
